County commission wants Pebble Beach to have 'very low income' housing

By KELLY NIX

THE PEBBLE Beach Company should build housing for low income and very low income residents in Del Monte Forest, according to a decision this week by the Monterey County Planning Commission.

The P.B. Co. has argued against putting so-called inclusionary housing in the forest, offering to meet county requirements by paying a $5 million in-lieu fee that would allow units to be built somewhere else.

The planning commission's vote on the Pebble Beach project includes a recommendation of approval to the county board of supervisors, which is set to weigh in on the project in June.

Though the county's housing advisory committee earlier recommended "moderate income" housing be built in the forest, the planning commission approved a motion by commissioner Martha Diehl that the P.B. Co. be required to build about 20 units for people with "low," "very low" and "moderate" incomes.

"There are many, many employees who work in the Del Monte Forest that are in the 'low' and 'very low' category," commissioner Keith Vandever said.

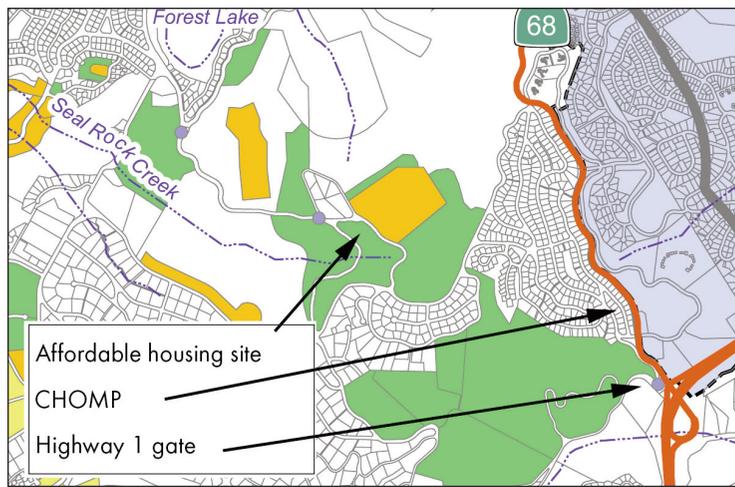

However, the Pebble Beach Co. has said the corporation yard near Spyglass Hill Golf Course — where the affordable units would be built — is relatively isolated, which could make it inconvenient for low income families to live there.

"The Del Monte Forest lacks shopping, schools, public transportation and other essential services," P.B. Co. executive vice president and general counsel Mark Stilwell told commissioners.

Stilwell also said the $5 million fee would allow a nonprofit developer to provide a greater number of affordable housing units than could be built in Del Monte Forest.

Taxpayers' group steps up campaign to halt 'user fee'

■ A postcard for every property owner

By KELLY NIX

MONTEREY PENINSULA home and business owners have less than two weeks to protest a user fee the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District wants to add to their property tax bills. And the proponents and opponents of the fee are making their last stands to get their points across.

The charge, which will go into effect automatically unless half the Peninsula's property owners protest it in writing by June 12, would generate about $3.7 million a year for the water management district — money the district says it will use to pay for expanded water storage facilities and a groundwater replenishment project.

"These two projects will provide half the replacement water we need" for the Peninsula, water district spokeswoman Rachel Martinez told The Pine Cone, "so we think it's important to get these projects moving."

Martinez said water district officials are continuing to talk to community and business groups to reiterate the district's position that without the fee, the water projects cannot be built.

But the Monterey County Association of Realtors and the Monterey Peninsula Taxpayers' Association are fighting the fee, which the groups argue is a tax that should be brought before voters.

The water district has "said over the years that it would use those fees to augment the water supply," according to Ron

Agha, P.G. at odds over who will pay to defend lawsuits

By KELLY NIX

AFTER WEEKS of negotiations with developer Nader Agha, the Pacific Grove City Council failed last week to finalize the first of two contracts that would allow the city to build and operate a desal plant on his Moss Landing property.

While the council voted 5-2 to continue to pursue an agreement with Agha, it was unable to iron out details of a clause in the paperwork that would ensure P.G. is protected from litigation — a hot-button issue that Agha's attorney said if not resolved, could "jeopardize the deal."

While Agha has agreed to indemnify the city against some legal actions, his lawyer, Paul Hart, told the council at a special meeting May 23 that Agha could not provide the city with "unlimited risk."

Council puts off vote on budget

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CITY council last week continued its exhaustive discussion of the 2012/2013 budget but did not vote to approve it, instead planning to engage in a more casual talk about money on Monday and then possibly cast votes on the spending plan at a July 12 special meeting. So far, council members have spent more than eight hours in budget talks.

"They wanted more opportunity to deliberate, so they scheduled a workshop for Monday, June 4, to talk about the budget," city administrator Jason Stilwell said this week.

There, they will continue to discuss ways to raise money, within the context of understanding how spending has been reduced during the past few years and what it would take to restore the city's services to pre-recession levels. At the May 24 budget meeting, Stilwell outlined $2.4 million in items that should be funded but are not included in the budget: three part-time and three full-time positions totaling $407,000, road maintenance costing $584,000, $458,000 for capital improvements and $293,000 in debt service.

The June 4 discussion will focus on how the city can raise that money.

"I think the community didn't have the information to fully understand the incremental cuts over the years and what that meant to services," he told The Pine Cone Wednesday. "We've been cutting 5 percent per year, and that has been adding up."

He also said the workshop setting would "allow people to have a better discussion about what kind of services they expect out of the city." Stilwell said, "I think there will be

LandWatch warns that water project may 'induce growth'

■ Wants new EIR to examine issue

By KELLY NIX

WHILE CALIFORNIA American Water says its proposed water project will simply replace water being illegally taken from the Carmel River without providing any for lots of record, business expansions, home remodels or new development, LandWatch Monterey County has told The California Public Utilities Commission the plan will, in fact, provide too much water and could lead to "induced growth."

"Newly available information on existing demand and water supply projects suggests that [Cal Am's latest] project may actually contribute to an oversupply of water," says the document, signed by LandWatch attorneys Mark R. Wolfe and John H. Farrow, with the San Francisco firm M.R. Wolfe and Associates.

LandWatch also says "new information" indicates that the EIR for a previous water project, "overstated demand." To save time and money, Cal Am wants to carry over the old EIR to its new project.

But, "the new demand information indicates that a smaller project is feasible" and "would reduce impacts and minimize

Gentle giant

HE COULD have been a mallard, splashing among the reeds in the shallows of Elkhorn Slough. Except he wasn't. He was a 6-month-old Chesapeake Bay retriever; abandoned, starving, sick and dying. And still he growled at her when she reached for him.

She rescued him as she has all of her animals. Her neighbors fostered him for six weeks while she cared for another wounded animal. By the time she retrieved him, he had defied hope and had begun to heal. And he had been named Blue.

She kept the dog and the name.

"I was going to try to find a home for him," she says, "but he was so shy, so afraid of people; I just couldn't let him go. I picked him up, looked into his face and said, 'Blue; if you make it, I will get you the most beautiful collar.' And so we did."

Slowly, he learned to trust people, to accept other animals, to feel sure of himself. Seven years later, Blue, who weighs more than 100 pounds, is known as the "Gentle Giant."

One afternoon, Blue, who had never barked, came running in to find her, barking and whining, frantic as he ran away and came back, until she realized he needed her to follow. He led her down the hill, through the trees and into the mud, where her horse lay, with a life-threatening illness.

"I didn't know they paid attention to each other, didn't know they had formed a bond," she says. "Blue is very generous with his love, whether it is a small quail in the brush, my horse in trouble or me. He is so grateful to have a second chance at life; he finds ways to say, 'Thank you.'"

Goodhue, LePage recommended for planning commission

■ Council to consider those and other appointments Tuesday

By MARY SCHLEY

MAYOR JASON Burnett and Vice Mayor Ken Talmage announced their recommendations to fill six vacancies on three city commissions Thursday. The appointments, drawn from an unusually large field of applicants, will be voted on by the full council at its June 5 meeting.

While city hall has faced challenges drawing volunteers to serve on its boards and commissions in the past, eight people applied for two vacancies on the planning commission, four lined up for an opening on the forest and beach commission, and four applied for three spots on the community activities and cultural commission. After interviewing all the candidates over the course of a week, Burnett and Talmage made their selections.

“Overall, across those six individuals, I am really excited about what they’re going to bring to the city,” Burnett told The Pine Cone.

On the planning commission, retired architect Don Goodhue would replace Victoria Beach, who was elected to the city council in April. His term would end in 2014, at which point he could apply for reappointment. Goodhue worked as an architect on the Monterey Peninsula for 40 years and founded the firm that became HGHB. He was also an advisor to the architectural review committee in Del Monte Forest for 25 years. Among the notable projects his firm handled were the conversion of a former bank into the Park Branch of Harrison Memorial Library, and the master-planned neighborhoods of High Meadows, Quail Lodge, Skyline Forest and Aguajito Oaks. A Harvard graduate, Goodhue has won architectural awards on the local, state and national level.

Burnett told The Pine Cone Goodhue was a good choice, because the planning commission should have a member with expertise in architecture, and his retired status means he won’t face any conflicts of interest.

“Don Goodhue is going to be stellar on the planning commission,” Burnett said. “And he was highly recommended by Olof Dahlstrand. They used to work together, so his recommendation carries enormous weight.”

He and Talmage are recommending Michael LePage replace Steve Hillyard, whose term expires next year. Hillyard was appointed to the council to fill Burnett’s seat. A general contractor who served on the now defunct design review board for eight years, LePage narrowly lost the 2008 council race to Talmage. Burnett pointed out LePage brings 40 years of local construction experience to the commission, along with his service on the DRB.

“So he’s going to be ready on day one to provide leadership,” Burnett said. The term he would fill expires next year.

On the forest and beach commission, Karen Ferlito would replace Todd Hornik, who resigned before his term ends in 2013. Ferlito, a salesperson for Carmel Bay Co., served two

Police & Sheriff's Log

Hair pulling bad, face punching worse

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Schley.

TUESDAY, MAY 15

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Forced-entry burglary of a business on Lincoln Street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A citizen found a loose dog on Carmel Valley Road and transported the dog to the Carmel Police Department for safekeeping. The owner was contacted via ID information attached to the collar. The dog was returned to the owner at the station with a warning and fees paid.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Civil issue between a consignment customer and a gallery owner on San Carlos Street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A juvenile walked away from the Carmel Youth Center after-school program and went to the police station. This was the second time the juvenile had done this. The youth center director and juvenile's father were contacted. The juvenile was escorted back to youth center.

Pacific Grove: Victim came into the police department lobby to report that she believes that someone put a metal object in the gas line to her stove to make it leak gas. Gas line has been repaired. Nothing further.

Pacific Grove: Report of a suspicious person consuming alcohol behind a store at Country Club Gate. The 52-year-old male was ID'd as a subject who was previously arrested for stealing from the store. The subject was on probation, and one of the terms was to stay away from the store. Subject was taken into custody and transported to MCSO.

Pacific Grove: Welfare check of a suicidal female. She was transported to CHOMP for a 72-hour hold for 5150 W&I.

Carmel Valley: Security at Tehama Ranch reported vandalism to the gatehouse call box.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 16

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Property found on Forest Road turned over for destruction.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Earring found on the beach.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man reported that his wife has been despondent over the loss of her son. She was intoxicated and had taken medication. She would not respond to his questions, and he was concerned for her safety. Upon contact with the female subject, CPD units determined there was no medical emergency, nor any mental health emergency. The husband left the residence for the evening, and a friend came to stay with the female.

Pacific Grove: Officers were dispatched to a report of a physical fight on Ransford between a brother and sister and the sister's boyfriend. Fight was determined to be mutual combat. Sister and boyfriend left the residence. Info only.

Carmel Valley: Report of multiple election campaign signs being stolen or missing along Carmel Valley Road.

Big Sur: Sheriff's deputy responded to Apple Pie Ridge for a medical call of an adult male, who was unconscious and not breathing. Medical treatment was unsuccessful, and the male was pronounced dead on scene.

THURSDAY, MAY 17

Carmel-by-the-Sea: East Camino Real resident stated his garage door had been nailed shut. Officer contacted the resident and confirmed his observations but noted the craftsmanship was of good quality. The resident had been drinking and was confused. Officer contacted the other party, who advised work was done weeks prior and he was unaware of the resident's dissatisfaction. Both parties communicated with one another and reached a mutual agreement to rectify the problem. This matter is civil only.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Dolores Street resident advised she felt threatened by her neighbor's dog walker. According to the woman, she was trimming her trees when the subject told her he was "witnessing a crime," (referring to trimming the trees) and was going to contact the police. The resident was concerned the subject might retaliate and wanted the subject contacted along with the incident documented. A check of the area was conducted but was unsuccessful at locating the subject. This report is for documentation purposes only.

Council to hear appeal, consider bag ban, learn about water and tolls

By MARY SCHLEY

AT ITS next regular meeting June 5, the Carmel City Council is set to decide whether to overturn the planning commission's approval of a new home on Lincoln Street and if the city should ban plastic bags, among other topics on the agenda released this week. The meeting will begin at 4:30 p.m. in city hall.

Jacqueline Simonelli is appealing the commission's May 9 OK of a new 1,800-square-foot, two-story home with a second-story balcony and a detached garage on Lincoln Street northwest of Fifth Avenue. She contends the house is too large and would violate her privacy because it would overlook her backyard. Associate planner Marc Wiener said the owners, operating under the name Pot D'or LLC, changed their plans to accommodate her prior to the commission's vote and is recommending the council deny her appeal.

The council will also consider a first reading of an ordinance amending the Carmel Municipal Code to ban plastic bags in stores (but not restaurants) "or, in the alternate, to defer action and direct staff to work with the business community."

The issue garnered significant testimony and comment at a planning commission meeting last month, when 19 people stood up to state their opinions. A number of them supported the idea, while several business owners decried not the ban, but having to charge customers a small price for paper bags. The fee would purportedly protect the city from legal action by plastics advocates who have argued that increased use of paper bags would harm the environment. Retailers, however, have said it's bad business to ask their clients to pay for the paper bags. Commissioners recommended the council develop a voluntary program rather than adopt a ban.

Also on Tuesday, the council is expected to ratify appointments to the city's commissions (see the story on page 3A), receive a presentation from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District about its efforts to increase the local water supply, and hear a Transportation Agency for Monterey County discussion on the possibility of charging tolls on Highway 156 between Castroville and Prunedale as a way to pay for four-laning it.

Items on its consent calendar — which are considered routine business and are often adopted in one fell swoop — include approving an agreement for a city treasurer, accepting a $16,000 donation for the San Antonio Pedestrian Pathway Project, revising the 2011/2012 budget, awarding $17,729 in grants to three nonprofits, accepting an anonymous donation of $1,200 for the digitization of the Devendorf-Galante Historical Collection, adopting amendments to the council's orders of business regarding the public comment period, and receiving Sunset Center's quarterly financial report.

With supervisor's primary looming, Del Piero rakes in biggest donations

By KELLY NIX

FIFTH DISTRICT Monterey County Supervisor candidate Marc Del Piero raked the most in campaign contributions in the past two months, according to disclosure statements released last week.

The statements indicate how much each of the three candidates running for supervisor received and spent in the period from March 18 to May 19. The primary election is June 5.

Though he was late to enter the 5th District supervisor race, Pebble Beach resident Del Piero, a water rights attorney and bankruptcy trustee, received $110,435.99. Of that, his biggest donation — $45,000 — came from an entity called the North Salinas Valley Fund for Responsible Growth.

Del Piero received donations from those knee-deep in the pursuit of a local water politics, including Kristi Markey, who sits on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board, and activists Janet Brennan, who gave $500, and George Riley, who donated $100.

Del Piero also got $1,000 from George Schroeder, a friend of developer Nader Agha who is proposing a water project in Moss Landing, and another $2,500 from 1030 Elm Ave, LLC, a company Schroeder is tied to.

In the past two months, incumbent supervisor Dave Potter has received $65,848.12 bringing his total for the year to $80,515.12.

Potter's donations include $5,000 from Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett, $2,500 from San Francisco developer David Bouquillon, $500 from Law Office of Gerard Rose, a former Carmel city councilman, $1,000 from the Monterey County Prosecutors Association and $2,500 from the Monterey County Business political action committee.

He also got $500 from the Peace Officers Research Association of California, a PAC from Sacramento, $500 from the Cannery Row Company, $250 from the Democratic Women of Monterey County and $250 from Nancy Kotowski, the superintendent of schools for the Monterey County Office of Education.

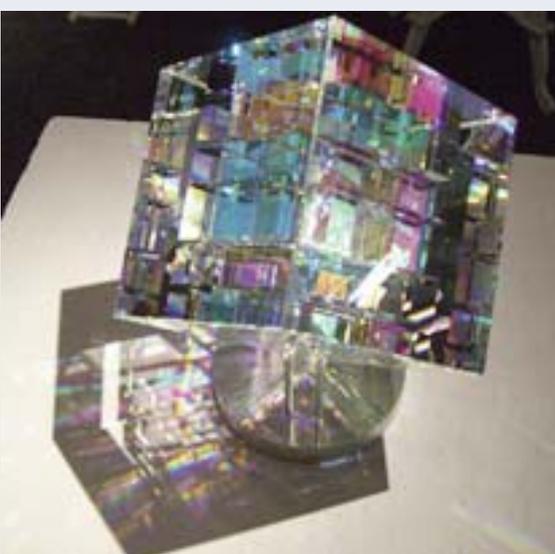

Pacific Grove Mayor and supervisor candidate Carmelita Garcia trailed with contributions of $14,236.63 in the past two months. Of that, she spent $12,253.07.

Garcia's notable contributors include $3,000 from Nader Agha's Moss Landing Commercial Park in the past two months — for a total of $5,000 for the year — and $100 directly from Agha. (Garcia is supporting Pacific Grove's involvement with Agha's proposed desal operation in Moss Landing.)

Garcia also received $1,000 from Ron Weitzman, a friend of Agha's and advocate of his desal plant, $129 from Prunedale activist Ed Mitchell, $1,000 from Mann Packing Company in Salinas and $1,000 from Sam Linder Cadillac Honda.

Cost of dam removal to Cal Am ratepayers could be decided June 21

By CHRIS COUNTS

HOW MUCH will tearing down San Clemente Dam cost Monterey Peninsula residents? After postponing a May 25 hearing that could have answered that question, the California Public Utilities Commission is now set to take up the issue June 21.

In 2010, an agreement was reached among Cal Am and federal, state and local agencies to share the costs of removing the dam to open up that part of the Carmel River to steelhead migration.

While the CPUC Division of Ratepayer Advocates endorsed the idea of removing the dam — and agreed that ratepayers could be charged $49 million for its removal — they have balked at Cal Am's insistence on charging ratepayers an additional $26 million to pay for studies and staff costs associated with shoring up the dam over the past decade to meet seismic safety standards.

(The total cost of removing the dam is estimated to be $83 million, with $34 million coming from state and federal taxpayers and a few private donations.)

According to Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Bowie, it is only fair that the water company is reimbursed for the work it has put into the project.

"Our operating costs are passed down to the customer," Bowie explained. "That is how we are regulated."

Bowie added that all the work Cal Am has done on the dam over the past 10 years "was the result of government orders."

Cal Am has been criticized for not doing enough to plan for the dam's removal. But Bowie said the water company sought permission from the CPUC in 1989 to start charging ratepayers for the eventual removal of the dam.

Two proposals, one choice

When the CPUC considers how much Peninsula residents should pay for the dam's removal, they'll have two proposed decisions to choose from. In November, administrative law judge Christine Walwyn said it would be fair to charge ratepayers $49 million for the dam's removal, but Cal-Am should not be reimbursed for the additional $26 million, because the water company's initial plan to shore up the dam would not have addressed its fatal flaw — the fact that a buildup of debris and sediment had rendered it inoperable.

"The dam has not been a used and useful asset since 2003," Walwyn determined, adding that it provides "neither flood storage nor water storage" and poses "serious environmental risks."

In April, CPUC commissioner Catherine Sandoval issued a second proposed decision, arguing that charging ratepayers the additional $26 million is reasonable because Cal Am "acted prudently" in addressing "the dam's seismic safety issues." Sandoval added that Cal Am's work in recent years protected ratepayers and the environment.

The DRA supports Walwyn's proposed decision. "Her [view] already represents a compromise," said Diane Brooks, a supervisor in the DRA's water branch. "I sat through the hearings, and she did a good job of weighing the evidence."

How much profit is fair?

The DRA also wants to ensure that Cal Am's shareholders don't make too much of a profit from the dam's removal. Walwyn's proposal suggests using a 5.27 percent rate of return for Cal Am shareholders, while Sandoval's proposal uses an 8.04 percent rate of return.

Bowie said the 5.27 percent rate of return "is less than it costs us to borrow money." "That could result in a higher interest rate for us and our ratepayers in the future," she added.

Over a 20-year period, Walwyn's proposal would cost Cal Am customers $74 million, while Sandoval's proposal could cost them $152 million.

Constructed in 1921 and operated by Cal Am since 1966, the dam is designed to store 1,425 acre-feet of water. It hasn't been used since 2002 — in large part because 90 percent of its capacity is filled with debris and sediment.

Because the California Department of Water Resources determined in 1992 the dam needed upgrading to comply with modern seismic safety standards, Cal Am initially considered shoring up the dam with concrete at a cost of $49 million. The private water company also conducted a study to determine the cost of removing the dam. The Carmel River Watershed Conservancy and Carmel River Steelhead Association endorsed the second proposal because of its benefits to the environment — and in particular, its population of steelhead. According to Cal Am's website, the dam's removal will allow steelhead "unimpaired access to over 25 miles of natural spawning and rearing habitat."

San Clemente Dam, constructed on the Carmel River in 1921, is no longer useful as a reservoir, and federal and state officials want it torn down. Monterey Peninsula residents will bear most of the $83 million cost, on top of all the other expensive water projects they're facing.

John Rogers Blinks

John Rogers Blinks, of Pebble Beach and Friday Harbor, WA, succumbed to Parkinson's disease on Tuesday evening at the age of 81. He was born March 21, 1931, in New York City. Dr. Blinks was Chairman of the Department of Pharmacology at the Mayo Foundation from 1968 to 1988 and a Professor of Pharmacology at the Mayo Medical School from 1973 to 1990. In 1990, he retired to Friday Harbor, WA, but continued to pursue his research as Professor of Physiology and Biophysics at the University of Washington's Friday Harbor Labs until 2002.

Dr. Blinks graduated from Carmel High School in 1948, received his BA in Biology from Stanford University in 1951 (elected to Phi Beta Kappa), and graduated cum laude from Harvard Medical School in 1955. After completing his internship and military service in 1958, he began his distinguished career in pharmacological research and teaching at the Harvard Medical School. In 1968 he was recruited by the Mayo Clinic to start its Pharmacology Department.

His awards include the Award of Merit from the American Heart Association in 1981; the Mayo Foundation Distinguished Investigator in 1985; the Otto Kraye Award from the American Society for Pharmacology in 1987; the MERIT Award from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute in 1988; the Research Achievement Award from the American Heart Association in 1989; and the Distinguished Alumnus Award from the Mayo Foundation in 1997.

Dr. Blinks' career in research was focused on understanding how calcium ions that are present in intracellular fluid control contractions in heart muscle. He and his team pioneered the use of aequorin, a protein that emits light in the presence of calcium ions, to gain a better understanding of calcium transport and its role in control of the muscle.

Dr. Blinks is the son of long-time Carmel residents Lawrence Rogers Blinks (1900-1989), Professor of Biology at Stanford and Director of Stanford's Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove from 1943 to 1965, and Anne Hof Blinks (1903-1995) well known to many in the community for her research and replication of historic and prehistoric textiles, her skill at spinning and weaving, and her never ending quest to breed the perfect color of black sheep.

Dr. Blinks met his wife, Doris Chambers Blinks, while she was studying for a Masters Degree in Marine Biology with his father. They were married in 1953 and are survived by three children, Susan Mayo Blinks of San Diego (an equestrian who frequently represents the United States in International Dressage competitions), Sarah Blinks Shapiro and her husband James Shapiro of San Francisco, and Elizabeth Rogers Blinks of Seattle, as well as four grandchildren, Samuel, Anne, Benjamin and Elizabeth Shapiro.

Dr. Blinks was widowed in 2003. Soon after, he had the good fortune to re-connect with his long time friend and Carmel High School classmate Francis Gillmore Maroun. They were married in 2006 and enjoyed a few years of adventure, including trips to Sicily, Norway and the Galapagos Islands, before Parkinson's disease began to restrict his activities. Francis Blinks has been his enduring source of support in these last years.

A service will be held at the Church in the Forest, 3152 Forest Lake Rd. in Pebble Beach, at 3:30pm on Saturday June 2nd. The family suggests that memorial contributions may be sent to your favorite charity, or to the Anne Hof Blinks Fellowship in Marine Biology, c/o Rachel Anderson, UW-Friday Harbor Labs, 620 University Rd., Friday Harbor, WA 98250 (the check should reference Anne or John Blinks).

Surfers take to the waves to battle mental illness

By CHRIS COUNTS

USING THE sport they love as more than just another exhilarating ride along a breaking wave, Bryan Flores and Randy Will say they believe surfing can be used to treat mental illness.

"When I spend time in the ocean, I feel better," explained Flores, who serves as an assistant to Monterey County Supervisor Dave Potter. "The feeling lasts for days, weeks, and even months."

While almost any surfer will attest to feeling stoked after spending time in the waves, Flores said he discovered the profound therapeutic effects of surfing after living in floating on Cloud 9," he remembered.

Before moving to Alaska, Flores worked with patients suffering from mental illness. His employer — the San Luis Obispo Mental Health Association — offered a gardening program call "horticulture therapy." The results were startling. "The patients seemed like different people when they were getting their hands dirty," he said.

After returning to California from Alaska — and quitting Prozac — Flores began to wonder if "surf therapy" could be as effective as horticulture therapy. He discussed his ideas with Will, whom he has surfed with since he was 14. Together, Flores and Will decided to start a nonprofit organization encouraged by their efforts.

"Many people in Monterey County suffer from mental illness, and many of our returning veterans have been diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder," Potter said. "It seems that this connection between mind and ocean is very promising. Given that a vast majority of my district is within a stone's throw of the sea, I am very excited to learn more about surf therapy and how it can add an additional layer of support for those with behavioral health issues."

Also offering encouragement is Dr. Wayne Clark, director of Monterey County Behavioral Health Bureau. "While surf therapy is not part of the mainstream treatment model, initial studies and information that I have seen look very promising and I look forward to finding out more about it," Clark said.

For Santa Cruz surfing legend Jack O'Neill, the idea that spending time in the waves can alleviate mental illness makes perfect sense. O'Neill is no stranger to innovative ideas — he's often credited with inventing the wet suit.

"It's proved therapeutic for people with physical and mental disabilities, for veterans returning from war, for everyone," O'Neill was recently quoted as saying. "I think in the next 30 years, we'll see the potential of that power become fully realized."

Randy Will (far left) and Bryan Flores are launching a nonprofit group aimed at combating mental illness with their favorite sport, surfing.

BRYAN FLORES

Alaska. For three dark and depressing winters, he worked for a company administering reading programs in eskimo villages. Flores' students were located so far from civilization that they could only be reached by air.

"I was diagnosed with seasonal affective disorder," Flores recalled. "It affects about 70 percent of the population in Alaska. I would be so depressed that I would call my family [in California] at 3 a.m. and I couldn't remember why."

Doctors prescribed Prozac for Flores' symptoms which he took for a couple months. Meanwhile, whenever he would return to California, his depression disappeared as soon as he stepped into the water.

"When I went surfing, I felt like I was dedicated to battling mental illness with surfing.

In addition to offering surf therapy to people suffering from mental illness, Flores and Will plan to conduct extensive research on the subject in an effort to gain credibility for their work within the mainstream medical establishment. Flores has been invited to present his research on surf therapy at the BLUEMIND 2 Summit in North Carolina June 4-5. The summit aims to bring together experts in ocean research and neuroscience to discuss the connection between the ocean and our brains.

While Flores and Will are still working on getting their nonprofit group off the ground, no less a supporter than Potter said he's

Conflict resolution subject of talk

AN AUTHORITY on the subject will talk about conflict resolution Saturday June, 2, at the Carmel Valley Library.

A program director for the Mandell Gisnet Center for Conflict Management, Sara Sturtevant will provide an introduction to the fields of alternative dispute resolution (ADR), negotiation, mediation, arbitration and other forms of facilitated conflict management.

In response to the shooting deaths of Elizabeth and Mel Grimes of Carmel Valley by their neighbor John Kenney in 2007, the Mandell Gisnet Center launched its Neighbor Project, which utilizes trained volunteer mediators to help neighbors resolve differences.

Founded in 2005, the center is located in the Monterey College of Law's Community Justice Center. It provides conflict resolution training, as well as a wide variety mediation and consulting services.

The latest installment in the library's First Saturday lecture series, the talk starts at 10:15 a.m. and is free. The library is located at 65 W. Carmel Valley Road. Call (831) 659-2377.

Susan Currier Giem

January 22, 1947 – May 24, 2012

CORRAL DE TIERRA - Born in Oakland, California, Sue was the eldest child of Jack & Jean Currier. With her family and beloved four-legged companion "Rocket" by her side, Sue succumbed to a hard fought battle with cancer.

The Curriers moved to Carmel Valley in 1953 where Sue grew up with her 3 siblings Chris (Mary) Currier, Sandy (David) Lewis and Robin (Don) Kramer. In her teens Sue was an avid rider; the family was a member of Trail & Saddle Club where she often participated in Gymkhana events. She attended (old) Carmelo and Sunset Schools, graduated from Carmel High in 1964 and attended Monterey Peninsula College. In 1967 she married George Giem; they had two daughters, Stacie (Andy) Hill & Stefani Giem (Karl Tombrink). Sue adored her three granddaughters Courtney, Mallory & Lindsey Hill. She enjoyed babysitting, going to their sporting events, taking them shopping and overnights at Grandma's were always a fun time.

Sue worked at Wharf General Store for over 30 years as their bookkeeper and from her teens until early twenties you could find her working evenings at her dad's restaurant Al & Jack's Rocky Point in Big Sur. When George inherited the family business of Carmel Mobil, (later to become Carmel Chevron, now Carmel Towing & Garage) from his father Harry Giem, Sue became Vice President and CFO.

She loved walking in the Big Sur Marathon, doing the 21 mile walk several times and the 10 mile many more times. Garland Park was a special place for her and her sisters to go hiking and remember their parents. She and George loved RV'ing in Palm Springs and traveling through the scenic Western USA. Cruising and trips to Hawaii were always treasured vacations.

Sue had a kind heart and was a caring and giving person to those of us who were lucky enough to be her friend. She was preceded in death by both her parents, and is survived by her husband, daughters, granddaughters, siblings, nieces, nephew and many, many friends.

The family would like to thank Sylvia Giem for her unwavering support, devotion, and attentive dedication, Dr. Mark Vierra, Dr. Jerry Rubin and his caring staff, CHOMP, and VNA Hospice for the compassionate in-home care they provided. Sue requested no service, a Celebration of Life will be held Saturday, June 30, from 1:00 to 4:00 at the Golden Tee, Monterey Airport. In lieu of flowers the family suggests a donation to Hospice of the Central, Animal Friends Rescue Project or charity of your choice.

“Play Misty for Me” to play under the stars at Forest Theater

By CHRIS COUNTS

A PSYCHOLOGICAL thriller that showcases Carmel and its most famous resident, “Play Misty for Me,” screens Tuesday, June 5, at the Forest Theater.

Making his directorial debut as well as starring in the film, Clint Eastwood plays a KRML radio disc jockey who has a brief affair with an obsessive listener who becomes his stalker.

In addition to being a hit at the box office and earning Eastwood critical praise, the film uses many familiar local places as backdrops, including Carmel, Big Sur, Fisherman’s Wharf and the Monterey County Fairgrounds, where scenes from the 1970 Monterey Jazz Festival were shot for the movie.

“It’s wonderfully paced, beautifully played and locally shot,” said Rebecca Barrymore, executive director of the Forest Theater Guild. “Clint has such a nice, easy swagger to his role.”

The following evening — Wednesday, June 6 — the Big Sur International Short Film Series kicks off its 2012 season at the Forest Theater. The first installment of the series includes screenings of “Disinstallare Un Amore” by Coralla Ciccolini (Italy), “A Trois/Three” by Vanessa Clément (France), “Customer Support” by André Øvredal (Norway), “Chateaux Mouton Rothschild” by Louis Aubert (France), and “Tumult” by Johnny Barrington (Scotland).

The films were selected by a jury that included musicians Phillip Glass and Laurie Anderson, cinematographer Vilmos Zsigmond and actress Kirsten Dunst.

Showtime is 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $10. Moviegoers are encouraged to dress warmly. The Forest Theater is located at Santa Rita and Mountain View. Call (831) 626-1681 or visit www.foresttheaterguild.org.

Down the coast and free

The following night — Thursday, June 7 — the Big Sur International Short Film Series makes its 2012 Big Sur debut at the Henry Miller Library. The screening — which features the same lineup as the June 6 event in Carmel — begins shortly after sunset.

The event is free. Again, moviegoers are encouraged to dress warmly. The library is located about 28 miles south of Carmel. Call (831) 667-2574. For a complete short film series schedule, visit www.bigsurfilm.org.

Husband and wife launch musical partnership

CELLIST EDWARD Arron and pianist Jeewon Park — who just happened to be married — make their debut as a musical duo when they perform Friday, June 1, at All Saints' Episcopal Church.

Arron is artistic director for the Metropolitan Museum of Art's "Artist in Concert" series and once shared the stage with cello icon Yo-Yo Ma at Carnegie Hall.

Together, Arron and Park will perform Mendelssohn's Variations Concertantes in d major; Arvo Pärt's Fratres (1977); Saint-Saens' Sonata in c minor, Opus 32; and Rachmaninoff's Sonata in g minor, Opus 19.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. All Saints' Episcopal church is located at Ninth and Dolores. Tickets are $45 for premium seating, $25 for general admission, and $10 for students. For tickets, call (831) 624-3883 or visit

Solo or backed by duo, Carter is one of a kind

By CHRIS COUNTS

SERVING UP an irresistible mix of swinging jazz, rockin' blues and popular standards, singer Andrea Carter returns Friday, June 1, to Bistro 211 in the Crossroads shopping center.

"I know the word 'unique' gets bandied around almost as much as 'awesome' these days, but Andrea really is one of a kind," said standup bass player Rick Chelew, one of her longtime musical partners. "Though she's known mostly as a jazz singer, her roots go back to folk music and the [pop and rock] music of the 60s, and you can hear a joyous straightforwardness in her singing. She doesn't mimic any of the great jazz singers, instead making standards her own with a relaxed, personal, authentic delivery."

Chelew said the intimate Bistro 211 is just the right setting for one of Carter's solo shows.

"I walked into Bistro 211 one night when she was singing, and it was one big party," he recalled. "Her solo shows are definitely worth checking out."

The music starts at 6 p.m. Call (831) 625-3030 for reservations or visit www.bistro211.com.

Two days later — Sunday, June 3 — as a member of the trio, Andrea's Fault, Carter teams up with guitarist Darrin Michell and Chelew at the Big Sur River Inn.

"Andrea doubles on lead vocals and drums, which is not an easy feat," Chelew explained. "Somehow she is able to keep a solid rhythm going even when she's delivering her

'COLD GLASS' HEATS UP MILLER GALLERY, P.G. ART CENTER OFFERS 'TINY TREASURES'

By CHRIS COUNTS

BILLED AS one of just three "cold" glass sculptors in the world, Jack Storms will unveil an exhibit of his work Saturday, June 2, at the Jim Miller Gallery.

Combining lead crystal and dichroic glass to create beautifully reflective, hand-sculpted works of art, Storms utilizes a slow, painstaking process — in fact, it can take weeks or even months for him to complete a single piece.

When New York Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter recorded his 3,000th career base hit, Storms commemorated the occasion by creating a crystal baseball bat made of 3,000 pieces of glass.

And nearly a decade ago, Storms played an unusual but effective role in helping the Carmel Valley Rotary Club expand its efforts to create blood banks in Nigeria. To help Rotarian Warren Kauffman opens doors and meet high level government officials, the artist donated a dazzling glass sculpture to the president of Nigeria. Kauffman called Storms' sculpture "breathtaking" and said that "as a result of Jack's gift, we have been collaborating with Nigeria's minister of health for 10 years."

The reception starts at 1 p.m. The show will be on display until the end of the month. The gallery is located on the north side of Ocean between Dolores and San Carlos. Call (831) 625-0425 or visit www.jimmillergallery.com.

■ Miniature show packs a mighty punch

The Pacific Grove Art Center's annual Tiny Treasures show opens Friday, June 1, offering budget-minded art lovers an opportunity to add to their collections for the price of a $3 raffle ticket.

Ranging from paintings and drawings to mixed media and glasswork, more than 140 miniature pieces of art were donated to this year's raffle, including works by prominent local artists such as Mark Farina, Frank Sunseri, Art and Cindy Hornung, Julie Heilman, Karen Mahaney Lowe and Marie Gilmore.

The miniatures will be on display until July 13. Until then, people will have an opportunity to buy $3 raffle tickets and place as many as they like into the corresponding boxes below each piece of art. The art center will host a drawing July 12. The winners do not need to be present.

"There's some great stuff in this year's show," noted Jaqui Hope, executive director of the art center. "It really runs the gamut."

Also opening June 1 at the art center are exhibits by painter and mixed media artist Alana Puryear ("Big and Small"), painter

Paradise parties, Pezzini popup and a pooch party

AS PEOPLE do when they know each other well, are exceedingly comfortable in their environment and are experts in what they do, Nancy Rohan and Jon Kasky share a kitchen like dancers on a crowded floor.

Somehow they manage not to step on each other's toes as she prepares a salad of lettuces, arugula, herbs and vegetables with a vinaigrette of honey and thyme while he fries stuffed squash blossoms.

Rohan and Kasky own Paradise Catering in Carmel Valley, where they have worked together for almost 25 years to satisfy clients by preparing masterful, fresh dishes that often capitalize on the ingredients cultivated on the one-acre Via Contenta property where they live. The couple organically grows not just herbs and salad greens, but 500 types of heirloom tomatoes, unusual squashes and peppers, beans, uncommon citrus like the fingered Buddha's Hand, colorful lettuces, Zinfandel grapes and a wide variety of herbs.

They even raise shiitake mushrooms on oak logs, and two of the controversial pinkfleshed apples that gained publicity in a legal battle involving Earthbound Farm grow there, too. A "prehistoric garden" in front of the house brims with mosses, bromeliads and other ancient plants.

All of their gardens are fed with compost made from fruit and vegetable trimmings from their commercial kitchen, while old wine corks are shredded to make mulch.

They also have three hens named after Rohan's favorite event planners: Amy (Amy Byrd Weddings) Heidi and Karissa (Coastside Couture).

of 25 workers on call, as well as others waiting in the wings. May marked the start of the “crazies,” as Rohan calls them: Paradise is catering weddings every weekend until the end of November, sometimes two on the same day. The crew often works at Holman Ranch, where Kasky and Rohan’s pioneering practice of bringing grills with them so they can cook onsite has earned them praise for their from-scratch cuisine. Rohan said weddings got them through the recession.

“People still want to get married,” she observed.

Some clients prefer the classics, but Kasky and Rohan are also happy to undertake less conventional nuptial celebratory feasts, such as an Italian festa or a whole roasted pig.

While the wedding business has held strong, Rohan said corporate clients are also finally starting to spend money again. And after a quarter-century in business, the team at Paradise Catering — including Ben Brenner (who, among other things, is particularly skilled in capitalizing on the searing heat of the couple’s outdoor pizza oven) — is looking forward to more new and exciting assignments.

■ Popup at Pezzini

Casanova chefs Jon Cox and James Anderson are collaborating with their favorite artichoke grower, Pezzini Farms, to host a popup dinner at the farm in Castroville on Friday, June 1, at 5:30 p.m. The dinner is one in a series of special events intended to showcase local farmers, growers and other purveyors who work with the Georis family’s Casanova and La Bicycleette restaurants.

“We always use Pezzini artichokes, because they’re right there, and they’re great,” Anderson said Tuesday. “We’re really trying to reach out to as many of the local farmers and distributors as possible, incorporating them and our restaurant, as well. We’re trying to do something every month.”

Seats are still available for the dinner, which costs $125 per person and is limited to 40 attendees. The evening will benefit the nonprofit Rancho Cielo, which has a culinary academy and other programs that teach viable job skills to kids in need and those in the criminal justice system.

The menu will include pancetta-wrapped baby artichoke hearts, artichoke soup shots, a crudo of shaved baby artichoke with shaved parmesan, and seared bigeye tuna and lobster medallions with braised fennel and artichokes, among other dishes, according to Anderson. Even dessert will feature artichokes, since it will include sorbet made of Cinar, an Italian liqueur made from the thistle.

“Dinner will be at the store or in the farmhouse,” Anderson said. “It should be fun.”

To sign up, email shelby_knowlton@yahoo.com or call (800) 347-6118.

■ Vines and minds

To support scholarships and research in viticulture and enology, the third annual Winery Walk, Rock and Run will be held Saturday, June 2, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Paraiso Vineyards.

Participants will walk or run a five-mile course through the vineyards to raise funds for the Monterey County Vintners and Growers Foundation, which provides scholarships to the children of agricultural employees. (Last year, the MCVGF provided more than $15,000 in scholarships to Monterey County students.)

Registration starts at 9 a.m., with the walk/run beginning at 10. After crossing the finish line, participants will receive T-shirts, massages from Aquablue Skin and Body Spa, and lunch from Tacos Pacheco Taqueria, Portobello’s and the Salad Shoppe, as well as wine and beer.

The minimum donation to participate is $100, while family and friends can take part in the post-party activities for $30. Paraiso Vineyards is located at 38060 Paraiso Springs Road in Soledad. For more event details and registration, visit www.montereywines.org or call (831) 375-9400.

Walkers and runners will traipse through the vineyards Saturday to raise money for scholarships for the children of ag workers during the annual Winery Walk, Rock and Run.

■ La Merienda BBQ

The Monterey History & Art Association will celebrate the City of Monterey’s 242nd Birthday with La Merienda Saturday, June 2, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. La Merienda, named for the Spanish term for an afternoon picnic or midday meal, is a reenactment of an 18th century fiesta that includes a barbecue served by local public figures and a 75-pound birthday cake decorated with fresh roses.

According to organizers, “the cake is carried in by local young men (“cake-bearers”) and is sliced with the sword of Colonel Roger S. Fitch, the first president of the Monterey History & Art Association.”

La Merienda is held at the Memory Garden in the patio of the Old Pacific House at 20 Custom House Plaza in downtown Monterey. Tickets are $55 for MHAA members and $75 for nonmembers. For more information, see www.montereyhistory.org or call (831) 372-4445.

■ Pooch party

Peace of Mind Dog Rescue, which finds new homes for elderly dogs and takes custody of pups whose owners are too elderly to take care of them, will hold its annual Oldies but Goodies Party for the Dogs Sunday, June 3, from 1 to 4 p.m. The celebration at the Carmel Mission Inn on Rio Road at Highway 1 in Carmel will include food, wine tasting, micro-brewed beer, dancing on the patio, an Elvis impersonator, a white elephant silent auction and a raffle.

Guests are encouraged to bring a new or slightly used white elephant gift in exchange for a free raffle ticket. Admission is $50 per person until May 26, when the price increases to $60. Buy tickets at www.peaceofminddogrescue.org or mail a check to POMDR, P.O. Box 51554, Pacific Grove, CA 93950. For more information, call (831) 718-9122 or email info@peaceofminddogrescue.org.

■ Beer Fest lineup announced

Organizers of the 2012 Monterey Beer Festival reported more than 80 breweries will be featured during the annual salute to suds set for Saturday, June 9, from 12:30 to 5 p.m. at the Monterey Fairgrounds. Chicago White Sox heavy hitter Frank “Big Hurt” Thomas will emcee the festival while celebrating the California debut of his own brand, Big Hurt Beer.

Beer wagons will be pouring samples of Deschutes, Ninkasi, English Ales and Bruvado, and more than 80 breweries at tables throughout the grounds will offer tastes of lagers, ales, stouts, porters and other beers from America, Belgium, Germany, England, France, Australia, Thailand, Italy, Asia, Ireland, Russia, Mexico and Jamaica.

Local food vendors will offer barbecue, California cuisine, Kettle Korn, fried fish, bratwurst and other satisfying, beer-friendly food.

Main event tickets cost $40, and VIP tickets, which include snacks and early admission at 11:30 a.m., are $60.

Tickets are available at Post No Bills Craft Beer House in Sand City, Compagno’s Deli in Monterey, the Monterey Fairgrounds office, English Ales Brewery in Marina, Wild Thyme Deli in Marina and Zeph’s One Stop in Salinas. ■ New director to take over art center

In other news from the Pacific Grove Art Center, Jaqui Hope announced this week she will be leaving her post as executive director at the end of the month. She will be replaced by Alana Puryear, who currently serves as a board member for the art center.

"I will be leaving the area for an open-ended period of travel beginning the end of July," said Hope, who took over when Joan McCleary retired early last year.

Hope told The Pine Cone that the art center will be in good hands with Puryear at the helm.

"I feel she's so qualified for the position," Hope added. "I'm happy turning over the art center to her."

■ Rosamond remembered

A new series of affordable prints by the late artist Christine Rosamond will be unveiled Friday, June 1, at the Carmel Art Institute.

Noted for her popular series of paintings exploring the changing roles of women, Rosamond died in 1994 when she was swept out to sea near Rocky Point in Big Sur.

In addition to showcasing Rosamond's work, the June 1 event will include a reading by Stacy Simone of an excerpt from Julie A. Lynch's screenplay about the late painter's life, "Before the Wave."

Also, Rosamond's daughter, Drew Benton, will exhibit her own work publicly for the first time.

A reception starts at 5 p.m. The CAI is located on the second floor of the Hatton Barn in the Barnyard Shopping Village. To RSVP, call (831) 309-0126.

"She is, without a doubt, one of my favorite musicians of all time and I always have one of her CDs in my rotation," said local music promoter Kiki Wow.

The performance starts at 5 p.m. Plaza Linda restaurant will serve tapas and local wines will be poured. Tickets are $10 and reservations are recommended. Jan De Luz Antiques is located at 1 Carmel Valley Road. Call (831) 659-4229.

■ Plaza Linda packs its bags

As Plaza Linda in Carmel Valley Village works out the details of its upcoming move to the former Volcano Grill location, the Mexican restaurant will present music at its soon-to-be-former location at 9 Del Fino Place for at least another week.

A one-man cover band, the versatile and talented Martin Shears takes the stage Friday, June 1, at Plaza Linda. The following night — Saturday, June 2 — Grumbling Ginger plays acoustic folk rock at the same venue "with a Celtic twist." The trio features Jana Heller on lead vocals and guitar, Andrew Gilhooley on percussion and mandolin, and Shannon Miller on vocals and percussion. Both shows starts at 7 p.m. and there's a $10 cover. Call (831) 659-4229.

■ Dueling trios play in Big Sur

In Big Sur, 7 Come 11 performs Saturday, June 2, at Fernwood Resort. Featuring Gianni Staiano on Hammond organ, Kris DoNoto on drums and Danny Mayer on guitar, the trio has an affection for super funky grooves and head-banging hard rock. The music begins at 9 p.m. and there's no cover. Fernwood is located about 25 miles south of Carmel. Call (831) 667-2422.

And way down the coast, The Local Boys, featuring "Paolo, Dylan and Jesse on strings" play Monday, June 4, at Treebones Resort, which is located just off Highway 1, about 65 miles south of Carmel. The music starts at 6:30 p.m. and there's no cover. Call (877) 424-4787.

HOUSING

Planning commissioner Jay Brown, who took issue with several aspects of the development plan, told Stilwell "it sounds like" the P.B. Company believes there aren't any good locations in Del Monte Forest for affordable housing.

Stilwell responded, "It's a resort community. That's why we don't have shopping centers, cinemas and other amenities."

Brown also said he was concerned about the "chaos" that could ensue if the State Water Resources Control Board enforces a cease and desist order, which could mean drastic cutbacks in water use if a new supply isn't built by the end of 2016.

"If there is not an alternate source of water identified, and these projects come online, then you would have hundreds of people moving to an area that is facing as much as 65 percent water reduction," Brown said.

However, the state water board order exempted Pebble Beach Company from the order because of a $67 million water reclamation project the company helped finance in 2008. The project includes a reverse osmosis desalination plant that turns sewage from the Carmel wastewater treatment plant into potable water for use on golf course and other open spaces in Pebble Beach.

The $200 million Pebble Beach plan has recently gotten widespread support since the company abandoned efforts to build a new golf course. On May 9, the California Coastal Commission approved the plan after years of disagreement with P.B. Co. over it

The project includes the construction of 40 new units at the Inn at Spanish Bay, 55 units at the Pebble Beach Lodge, conference center improvements, a new 100-room hotel at Spyglass Hill, the relocation of a driving range, 90 to 100 single-family-home lots, road and trail improvements, and the renovation of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center.

It also sets aside 635 acres of Monterey Pine forest and other habitat in Del Monte Forest as permanent protected open space.

The project will mean hundreds of construction and hospitality jobs and will generate about $7.5 million in taxes, according to the P.B. Co.

FEE

Pasquinelli, president of the taxpayers' association. "They have not done so. There is no guarantee that they will do so now. The money would go into their general fund to pay for a bloated and wasteful bureaucracy."

The taxpayers' group has nearly finished mailing 41,191 protest forms to Peninsula property owners. The notices contain the group's one-page explanation of the user fee along with a 3-by-5-inch card already marked with the name and address of the property owner. It even has a stamp on it.

"All the owners need to do is sign the card and drop it in the mail," Pasquinelli said.

The notices will be directed to the group's Monterey P.O. box. Each will be photocopied and delivered to the water district on June 12, the date set for a public hearing about the fee at the Hyatt Hotel in Monterey and the deadline for all Peninsula property owners to protest the fee.

So far, the group — which has spent $22,000 for postage, plus thousands more on printing, envelopes and other costs — has received about 800 cards back, according to Pasquinelli. About 15,000 to 16,000 protests must be received by the water district to stop the fee, something the taxpayer's group hopes to accomplish.

"Somebody has to look out for the ratepayers," he said. "It hasn't been the water management district, and it certainly hasn't been" California American Water.

Meanwhile, water district general manager Dave Stoldt wrote an opinion piece that ran in the Monterey County Herald May 25 refuting the realtor group's contention that the fee isn't needed to solve the Monterey Peninsula's water supply problem.

"Assertions that the projects will get built regardless of the fee are incorrect," Stoldt wrote. "There is a high likelihood that groundwater replenishment will not go forward without the district's funding, and completion of the district's aquifer storage and recovery project would be suspended."

SIDES TAKEN IN SCHOOL DISTRICT'S QUEST FOR ANOTHER BOND MEASURE

By MARY SCHLEY

A BATTLE is brewing over whether residents of the Carmel Unified School District should be asked to approve another bond for more construction at its public schools. While administrators contend taking on additional debt is the only means of upgrading facilities, some argue it would be a waste of time and tax dollars to put the matter to voters now.

Jeanne Hale, a former CUSD parent who worked to pass the first $20 million bond in 2000 and was involved with the district for 19 years, pointed to a reported $73.5 million spent on capital work during the past 12 years, including $41.5 million in bond money supplemented by donations, state tax dollars and the CUSD general fund.

In a May 21 letter to the board, she challenged a district-issued newsletter explaining the logic behind asking for a third bond.

"While the newsletter is well written and impressive as far as giving the community a descriptive review of what the district has accomplished," she wrote, "I do feel it spins the information."

She said the first bond was meant to pay for modernization at the district's campuses. The total cost ended up being $30 million, which included $4 million in general fund money and $6 million from the state, because the schools were in worse shape than anticipated. The second bond, passed in 2005, helped pay for Carmel High School's $10 million performing arts center and other improvements, but only with more state tax dollars, donations and money from the general fund.

"I do believe CUSD has an outstanding academic program — and we are extremely fortunate to have the beautiful facilities — but it has all been done at a huge cost," she said. "There has been poor management, and lack of fiscal responsibility and foresight."

She questioned the need for a new football field and athletic facility at the high school, a practice gym, a new admin-

"It now shifts back to unlimited risk and exposure and indemnification," Hart told the council, "which is exactly what we talked about not being able to do."

His comments were at odds with Agha's original promise to the council that it had "nothing to lose" by getting on board with his desal plan.

The council has said it wants Pacific Grove to build and own Agha's project as long as it can be shielded from litigation. Being sued is a likely result of any move to actually build the plant.

City manager Tom Frutchey said that unless the wording in the proposed deal is changed, it would exclude the city from being protected in the event, for instance, water provider California American Water sues P.G. for interfering in the franchise agreement it has with the city.

'The only ones'

In making his case to the council, Agha reiterated the importance of a water project that is publicly owned and cited the $128 million cost of the plant — a much lower estimate than California American Water's proposed $370 million Monterey Peninsula Water Supply Project.

Cal Am is a regulated utility, which means the financing and operation of its desal plant would be structured so it would probably make a return for its stockholders. That profit wouldn't account for the huge difference between what the water company says its project would cost, and what Agha says he would spend. His numbers have been met with skepticism.

"We're the only ones in America who can do it, because we're keeping all the profit out of it," Agha said. He also said the project is "not to make money" but "to serve the people."

Later in his speech to the council, though, Agha said a "major salt company" and a local "salt operator" had contacted him about selling the brine that would be discharged from the desal plant.

"They are willing to buy it," Agha said. "And believe me,

I will make some money. And I'm proud to say I'm going to make some money."

He went on to say that, "Whatever I make on the salt, I will give the city 10 percent of that profit, which will be a minimum [of a] million dollars a year."

The city would likely issue bonds for the desal project and spend tens of millions of dollars to purchase Agha's property in Moss Landing.

Councilman Rudy Fischer — who, along with councilman Dan Miller has trumpeted Agha's desal operation from the start — said, "We need to muzzle the naysayers and start the project."

Involvement a distraction

Pacific Grove resident Donald Murphy, however, made the argument that for every hour city staff works on the project, "they are not working on other critical issues," such as economic development and pension reform.

"It's a major, major public works project," Murphy said. "And this is a city that can't keep a children's pool operating and running. Why you think you can do this big project when you can't do that little thing sort of puzzles me."

He said the city should continue working with the Monterey Peninsula Regional Water Authority, a group composed of the six Peninsula mayors that was formed to discuss the best water supply solution.

Councilman Ken Cuneo also lauded Agha's project but conceded the city was "hanging on economically." He wanted assurances that the city's police, fire and library services wouldn't suffer if P.G. was hit with multiple lawsuits over the project.

"Where would we get the funding to defend ourselves?" Cuneo asked, before later voting to pursue the agreement.

After Huitt made the point that Pacific Grove's attorney — not Agha's lawyer — should address questions from the council about the proposed arrangement, city attorney Heidi Quinn said that even flimsy lawsuits against the city could be costly.

"Our court system is very slow," Quinn said. "As we have seen here in the city, sometimes litigation is without merit, but we still have to incur those costs to defend."

GROWTH

rate impacts," LandWatch told the CPUC.

Despite the new document, LandWatch executive director Amy White said the group doesn't believe the Cal Am project shouldn't offer any new water for growth.

"What we are saying is that state order 95-10 is supposed to replace [water drawn from] the Carmel River," White told The Pine Cone Tuesday. "And if the project seeks to provide water for growth, then that needs to be analyzed."

Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett said he believes LandWatch is mistaken that the Cal Am proposal might be growth-inducing. But he also said the Peninsula "needs water for infill development," because it would benefit communities that need a small amount of new development.

For example, "It would be an incredible thing for Carmel to be able to have some more apartments in the downtown core, so people would be able to frequent downtown businesses," Burnett said. But the water shortage makes getting permits for them impossible.

LandWatch suggests the "smallest possible project" be built and said other feasible water projects should also be evaluated. The group mentions developer Nader Agha's proposed $128 million desal plant in Moss Landing.

But Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Bowie said the company planned the new water supply project so it could comply with a cease and desist order issued by the State Water Board in 2009. The order — which will go into effect Dec. 31, 2016 — could force drastic cutbacks in water use on the Peninsula.

"The project is sized to ensure we can meet the terms of the cease and desist order in its first years of operation," Bowie explained. "In addition, sizing must take into account peak month consumption. We feel we have arrived at the project size needed to comply with the state cutbacks and meet our customer demand."

The $400 million project includes a 5.4 million-gallon-per-day desal plant in Marina, underground storage and recovery facilities, and a project to turn wastewater into drinking water. Cal Am has proposed building a larger, 9 million-gallon-per-day desal plant if the wastewater component doesn't come to fruition.

LandWatch said it's concerned the company might proceed with the larger desal facility even if the wastewater project is built.

"This requires a new analysis of induced growth," according to LandWatch, since Cal Am had concluded there would be no induced growth from its abandoned North Marina desalination alternative — a plant similar to the one the company is pursuing now.

The group is also calling for a new environmental impact report for the project instead of supplementing the existing one, as Cal Am has proposed. The existing EIR cost more than $3 million.

Other LandWatch concerns with Cal Am's proposal includes potential snags over brine disposal, "threats to special status species" and water rights.

"We were surprised in Cal Am's filing [for its new water project], there wasn't really any mention of water rights," White said.

LandWatch also complains that Monterey Peninsula residents could be facing "enormous rate increases" because of the new water project and the cost of tearing down San Clemente Dam.

And LandWatch's filing with the CPUC says Cal Am should also have a government partner in building the new water project, although the CPUC has said it would be OK if Cal Am owned it, just as many thousands of facilities in California providing water, gas, electricity, telephone and cable services — all regulated utilities — are privately owned.

"The project should use the lowest-cost financing, which is likely to be available only through a public-private partnership," LandWatch said.

BUDGET

more discussion of what the standards are and how we get there.”

At last Thursday’s meeting, Mayor Jason Burnett and the council spent considerable time discussing potential tax increases they could put to voters in November, as well as how they would cut spending in the 2012/2013 budget if those measures failed to gain approval.

Council members also pinpointed a few areas where they wanted to spend more than proposed in Stilwell’s draft budget, including sand replenishment on the beach, trail planning for the unused Rio Park, and the repair and maintenance of the city’s streets and public buildings.

Stilwell summarized their additions and subtractions to the budget and said he would return with a revised number at the July 12 meeting. All told, he said, council members wanted to add $173,000 in expenses but reduce spending by cutting funding for the free MST trolley service and working with Waste Management to pay for street sweeping.

They also discussed whether to fulfill Sunset Center’s request for $650,000, rather than the $590,000 earmarked in the budget, but they decided to first get more information from representatives of the center.

Fielding requests from other nonprofits, they decided to donate $1,000 to Carmel High School’s Sober Grad Night, as they have in the past, but opted against contributing to others.

“For about 20 years, we haven’t given money to organizations like this,” councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said, referring to a request from the United Way. Otherwise, an inundation of requests follows.

“I share Paula’s concern about a slippery slope,” Burnett said. “There are hundreds of very worthy nonprofits in Monterey County.”

At Burnett’s suggestion, the council agreed to give $25,000 to the mayors’ water group, even though the other cities in the group haven’t committed to ponying up that amount.

“I think we should send a good strong message,” Burnett said.

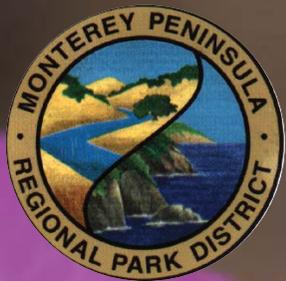

Toward the end of its three-and-a-half-hour meeting, the council decided not to vote on the spending plan, considering the late hour and the empty chambers.

“I feel really terrible that no one is here, and these meetings are going way, way, way too long,” Hazdovac said.

“The public has a right to be here, and if we’ve made it hard for them, that’s something we need to focus on,” Burnett agreed.

The workshop set for Monday, June 4, will begin at 5:30 p.m., and the next budget hearing is set for Tuesday, June 12, at 4:30 p.m.

Editorial

Everybody agrees: There must be new water

THE IDEA that a new water project for the Monterey Peninsula should not provide any water for growth has been so thoroughly discredited it isn't even worth mentioning anymore. Nobody in any responsible position is calling for cutting off water and other infrastructure as a way to prevent city councils and the board of supervisors from handing out a few permits. Everybody recognizes that a small amount of new water must be available to foster a healthy economy, make towns more livable and provide for basic human needs.

In fact, we're not sure anybody except a few extreme environmentalists ever supported the idea of cutting off water to control growth. The bizarre water shortage we're stuck with is a creature of state laws and not local politics; finding a way out of it has turned out to be next to impossible because those laws (CEQA and the Coastal Act, to name just two) are so Draconian, and because our state representatives (Bill Monning in particular) won't lift a finger to help us clear up the mess Sacramento created when it let the State Water Resources Control Board limit our water supply even as a whole host of state agencies and laws stand in the way of creating a new one.

Which is where the LandWatch move, reported on our front page today, to demand a new EIR to examine whether Cal Am's latest water supply proposal might be growth inducing, is highly regrettable, because even if the group's complaint is perfectly valid under CEQA, it also will trigger the lengthy delays inherent in the EIR process — delays we can no longer afford.

If LandWatch had the good of the community in mind, which it claims to do, rather than raise this objection to the Cal Am proposal, it would have come forth with a statement that said growth inducement was not an issue because the Monterey Peninsula's various general plans already make substantial growth impossible. And, furthermore, that the water shortage itself is causing so much environmental damage to the Carmel River, Cal Am's proposal can only be good, not only for people, but also for trout and frogs.

There is an overwhelming consensus on the Monterey Peninsula that we must have new water, including a small amount for new development. All we need now is for the state to let us have it. Considering how much is at stake, local advocacy groups should not be standing in the way.

When a newspaper doesn't like you

THE STORIES this week in The Monterey County Herald purporting to discredit 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter because of his supposed friendship with the man who wants to develop a horse park at Fort Ord are classic examples of hatchet jobs. The stories don't contain a single objective fact to back up their central premise; instead they are just innuendo and rumor.

A small portion of the former Fort Ord is designated for new development. For a county supervisor to facilitate use of those small parcels with development that might be good for the community is a commendable thing for him to do. And the fact that Potter may be acquainted with one of the would-be developers is just an everyday thing that happens to every politician everywhere.

So why did the Herald decide to pick on Potter, and to blast its "investigation" of him all over the front page right before the election? Because the Herald is dishonestly biased against Potter, plain and simple, and has been for a long time.

Letters to the Editor

Farr's election

Dear Editor,

After the June 5 election we will see confirmation of the "Dumbing down of America" and especially in the State of California. We will have re-elected Sam Farr, who along with Nancy Pelosi and Barbara Boxer, is directly responsible for the massive failure of this once great state. Liberalism can be charitable but socialism is criminal, especially toward our seniors.

George Galakatos, Monterey

'The third vote'

Dear Editor,

I support Marc Del Piero for one essential reason: He has committed to finding the third vote for issues important to the Fifth District.

I have seen too many times recently when Dave Potter willingly voted what he felt was "right" for his district. But he has failed to find the third vote that would seal the decision he favors.

Del Piero also has committed to transparency, and to emphasizing the long view in his decision making on the board of supervisors.

All three of these practical positions — get the third vote, transparency and long range thinking — are needed.

Potter has fallen down on the job. Sixteen years is long enough.

This is why I support Marc Del Piero.

'Delighted' when Del Piero announced

Dear Editor,

I was delighted when Marc Del Piero announced his candidacy for the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. I appreciated his open, friendly and attentive demeanor when appearing before him during his previous stint on the board.

Del Piero has said three very impressive things in recent public meetings.

- He intends to be very transparent in matters before the board of supervisors.

- He intends to work long range on every issue.

- He intends to work on getting the third vote on matters that impact the Monterey Peninsula.

These principles reflect a mature and sustainable system of priorities, particularly the commitment to work for the third vote.

The incumbent is touted as knowledgeable and experienced. After 16 years in office, he should be. But he has been a recent failure on these principles during the water chaos of the last few years?

It is time for a change. I urge others to vote for Marc Del Piero. He will bring the new, unobligated, commitment and energy that we need now.

Political forecast is enough to make you want to run for cover

A WEATHER condition known as “Beryl” marked the start of the hurricane season last week when it gathered steam off the coast of Florida before falling apart as it hit the coast.

As we know by now, hurricanes, tornados and other cataclysmic climatic episodes are created only to exact revenge upon the pagans who violate my specific concept of God’s will. The wretched “scientists” at the National Hurricane Center have conspired to withhold this truth from the public for many years.

Many of these climate scientists, who were educated at suspicious non-sectarian universities, are pushing the fiction that unregulated industrial pollution is causing Earth to “heat up” when we all know that climate change is simply Earth’s approaching proximity to hell-fire.

Also, the scientists are bad spellers, which is why Hurricane Byrl ended up “Beryl.”

Speaking of which, it is not without coincidence that the political season descends upon us at the same time that atmospheric conditions heat up with the promise of severe weather disturbances.

An active hurricane/political season is expected in the coming months, so citizens are advised to batten down the hatches for the approach of the following politi-storm systems:

Hurricane Byrl: After promise of much commotion, Byrl is downgraded to a tropical storm, then poops out to a mere depression as she approaches groundfall. Nevertheless, the National Hurricane Center notes that Byrl is “still soaking campaign donors.”

Hurricane Jane: Plods about the gulf without support from adjoining waterspouts that spit and whimper because Jane “stands in the way of progress.” National Hurricane Center declares that the environment actually improves when Jane strikes. Jane releases promotional video that depicts her moving in slow motion.

Topical Depression Dave: A puzzling gathering of damp conditions, Dave switches direction in midstream, makes friends everywhere it goes before losing them. National Hurricane Center refers Dave to state Fair Political Practices Commission.

Hurricane Marc: A Category 3 blast of hot air and bluster, followed by movement of water from one source to another. National Hurricane Center reports that water mysteriously disappears from Los Angeles when Marc strikes.

Hurricane Carmelita: National Hurricane Center declares Carmelita has fallen off the radar.

Hurricane Fernando: (also known as “Dust Devil”) Becomes active and strikes with a vengeance only when other weather phenomena try to get in its way. National Hurricane Center upgrades Fernando to “Category Venal.”

Hurricane Lou: Blows about in back rooms, victims are only aware of its presence after the damage is done, typically followed by a stationary front of doldrums. National Hurricane Center blames someone else.

Hurricane Simon: Comes and goes without notice. National Weather Service solicits citizens to sound the alarm if they happen to see Hurricane Simon in their neighborhood.

Hurricane Leon: Anything standing in the way of this Category 5 storm ends up in better shape than before it blows through. National Weather Services warns all Osamas to take cover.

Hurricane Sam: Typically accompanied by “family” of little hurricanes; victims develop an overwhelming urge to nap after Sam strikes. National Hurricane Center sets alarm clock.

Hurricane Anonymous: Collection of limp weather sys-

beyond the realm

By JOE LIVERNOIS

tems that chase Hurricane Sam every two years. National Hurricane Center downgrades Anonymous to “Category Morning Drizzle.”

Hurricane Nader: Roars across empty plains, blowing currency in all directions while stirring residents and officials with the promise of new beginnings. Runs out of steam as it reaches town. National Hurricane Center refuses to acknowledge its existence.

Hurricane Bill: A mediating permafrost with good intentions. National Hurricane Center warns citizens that Bill’s approach can be detected by the “wonkish” noise that precedes it.

Hurricane Jason: Unformed presence in the distance, waiting for Hurricane Sam to peter out. National Weather Service resets alarm.

Hurricane Mitt: (See Hurricane Sam, with better hair and brighter teeth.)

Hurricane Obama: Attendant electrical activity activates “hysteria switch” among victims wearing tinfoil hats; deposits rainbows and unicorns in its wake. Wingnuts within National Hurricane Center are unable to locate point of Obama’s origin.

Firehouses hand out free CO alarms

FIRE OFFICIALS in Pebble Beach and Carmel are distributing 500 carbon monoxide alarms to residents in the Cypress Fire Protection District (outside Carmel’s city limits) and Pebble Beach. CO is invisible and odorless, and can kill in minutes.

The two districts are using their “emergency assistance lists” to first target shut-ins, people with limited mobility and special medical needs, and those who don’t drive. Once they have their alarms, any leftover detectors will be handed out to those who request them while supplies last.

A new state law requires that “all single-family homes with an attached garage or a fossil fuel source” have carbon monoxide detectors. Officials recommend they be placed outside each bedroom and on each level of a home, including the basement.

To get a free CO alarm, contact Capt. Jennifer Valdez at the Pebble Beach Community Services District at (831) 647-5642 or Jennifer.Valdez@fire.ca.gov. In the Cypress district, call the Rio Road station at (831) 624-4511. To be added to either department’s emergency assistance list, contact Valdez.

How Stanford got its big payday

NIELS REIMERS was the last person born in a medical facility within the Carmel city limits. The year was 1933; the location was the Grace Deere Velie Harris Clinic,

Great Lives

By TONY SETON

which later became CHOMP.

Being such an important baby in the town's history, Niels naturally grew up in Carmel and went to Carmel High. Years later, when he was returning for a high school reunion, a college friend asked if Niels could give a ride to his girlfriend's roommate, Janet Nelson. A year after that, they were married.

Niels earned both a B.A. and a B.S. from Oregon State University in 1956 and then did a stint in the Navy. He started in a cryptography unit on an aircraft carrier, the Bon Homme Richard. He was in a cryptography unit that was so hush-hush, he had to shoo people out of his office when certain communications were coming in. He can't talk about some of them to this day.

After some work in the manufacturing sector, he went to work for Stanford University as associate director of contract management. He took early retirement in 1993, and today, Niels Reimers is active in a number of organizations on the Peninsula, including Yes for Carmel. He lives with his wife, Jan, near La Playa hotel. They'll be cel-brating their 50th anniversary in September.

That would have been a great life in itself, but there is much more to his story.

When Niels was at Stanford in 1968, he created a project to improve the way inventions coming out of university research programs were marketed. At the time, most universities around the country were getting significant research funding from the government and would send their inventions, primarily in the physical and medical sciences, to the Research Corporation for Science Advancement in New York, which would then try to match them with manufacturers.

Niels was curious. He checked how much money Stanford had received from the handling of their discoveries this way from 1954 to 1967. The total was around $4,500. He did his own research to see what other schools were doing and decided that Stanford could do much better. His idea was that Stanford should market its discoveries directly to companies that could make good use of them. Since they were the people who did the inventing, the people at Stanford would know better than a clearinghouse whom their inventions would best serve.

Another reason why this change in how new discoveries were managed was so important was that under the old system, maybe some 30,000 inventions had never found a home. They had simply been filed away. This was unlikely to happen if the universities did their own marketing.

Writer, director and producer Tom Parks would replace Clyde Klaumann, whose term expires in 2014. Parks' works are well known locally, and Burnett said he is qualified for the role because he is an "incredibly creative person and has a great understanding of the cultural history of Carmel. He will make sure we are respecting and building and honoring all of Carmel's cultural history."

Hofsas House hotel co-owner Carrie Theis applied for the planning commission but is being recommended to finish out the term of Conrad Kohrs on the CACC. Her appointment would expire in 2016.

"Carrie applied for the planning commission, but we felt her talents and experience would greatly complement the community activities and cultural commission," Burnett and Talmage wrote in their memo.

"When we sat down with her, it became quickly apparent to all three of us that she should be working" on the cultural and economic revitalization that are the mission of the CACC, Burnett said. Her connections with the hospitality and business communities will be useful in identifying, creating and supporting events that will draw more visitors to town and encourage those already here to stay a little longer.

"I'm really excited about what that commission can be working on," Burnett said.

the capital projects the money was used to build," he said. "I think that's a really important point."

District business official Rick Blanckmeister said the $73.5 million includes routine maintenance, like replacing roofs and stabilizing hillsides.

He also said a bond is the only way the district will be able to pay for more improvements, as a special fund for capital work has been depleted, and the state is taking more property tax money away from the CUSD budget.

"If the district is interested in engaging in any kind of capital repairs, there's no internal source for that," he said.

Therefore, the most obvious choice is a bond. Alternatively, CUSD could seek a parcel tax or leave the work undone.

"If we do these things, they will enhance the educational experience of our students, there's no doubt about that," Biasotti said.

Niels also realized that prestigious universities such as Stanford had an advantage over government labs, where staff researchers could be mired in the past.

At the universities, much of the work was done by graduate students, who were always coming up with new ideas and new ways to approach old problems, which meant that much more innovation was not only possible, but likely. Another advantage to using graduate students is that they will work for much less than established researchers. (There is a familiar joke in their world, that when Lincoln freed the slaves, he said "Don't worry, there'll always be graduate students.")

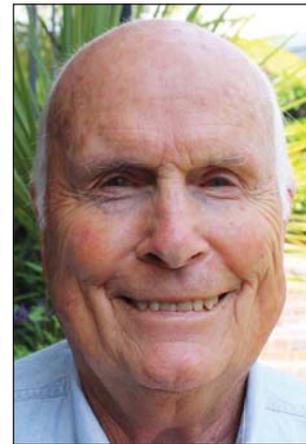

And, thanks to Niels' efforts, there would be money from royalties to support the graduate students, who could learn while they were working. They would then take their knowledge to new heights, in academia or private industry. It also meant there were funds for Stanford to keep on promising new researchers. The government turned out to like the idea, too, because it meant that discoveries taxpayers paid for would find practical applications.

Let it be noted that one of the major discoveries that found its way into the wider world of research and development was recombinant DNA. With the success of the Stanford approach, Niels and a number of colleagues and government officials pushed for legislation to expand the concept. In 1980, the Bayh-Dole Act formalized the idea that government-funded schools and small businesses could pursue ownership of inventions rather than leaving them in the hands of government. Niels was in the United States Senate gallery as the vote was taken.

By the way, as the result of Niels' work, Stanford has brought in more than a billion dollars in royalties. The total benefit to the hundreds of other institutions that followed his lead is incalculable.

Betty Kathryn Siegrist (née Minnick)

Betty Siegrist passed away quietly at her home in Carmel on Monday, May 7th after a time of declining health. She was predeceased by her husband of 51 years, Richard Siegrist, in 2006. Betty is survived by her three children: Gretchen Siegrist-Ortega (Doug); Alan Siegrist (Mitsuko); and Scott Siegrist (Barbara), and by her three grandchildren: Ashley Allen, Frederick Daichi Siegrist, and Adam Yuki Siegrist. Betty was the youngest of four children born to Blanche and Dowe Minnick. Betty is survived by her elder sister Anne Galloway (Dale) and predeceased by Dorothy "Dottie" and Daniel Minnick.

Betty was born in Shawnee Township, Indiana to Blanche (née McConahay) and Dowe Minnick on October 28, 1926 and raised in Attica, Indiana. She graduated from Attica High School in 1944 and from Indiana University, Bloomington, in 1949. Betty and Richard were introduced by a mutual friend, Peggy Poston, at IU and were married in Attica in the Minnick family home on August 21, 1955. Dick got a job at Lockheed Aeronautics Company in Sunnyvale, California thus moving the couple to California. They lived in Santa Clara for several years before relocating to the Monterey Peninsula in 1963. Richard and Betty owned and operated Edgemere Cottages in Carmel for more than 35 years. The move to Carmel was great for Dick and Betty; they loved running the inn, visiting with guests from all over the world, and sometimes getting invited to visit them as well; though they rarely traveled far from home... Betty loved to garden...she was fastidious about the roses in her garden. She loved finding a 'great deal' or searching for 'treasures' at estate sales around Carmel. This led to her owning and operating her "antique and collectible" shop Edgemere of Carmel in two locations for about 15 years in downtown Carmel.

She and Dick were founding members of the Carmel Chamber of Commerce and were charter members of the Monterey Aquarium. She was an active member of the Carmel Innkeepers Association for many years.

During the last several years Betty attended the VNA Adult Day Care Center in Monterey. She really loved "going to class." The family would like to acknowledge the wonderful care and compassion exhibited by Mia and her staff at the VNA Center. "Angel," her driver for the MST Rides program, is truly an "angel on Earth." The family would also like to thank Dr. Glenn Hudgens for his attention and helpfulness with mom over the years.

Betty will be interred at the City of Monterey Cementerio El Encinal next to her husband, Dick. A memorial service will be held on July 10, 2012 at the cemetery; time to be announced. In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be sent to the VNA of Monterey, or the Carmel Foundation.

four-year terms on the commission in the 1990s, during which its members drafted the forest, beach and Mission Trail park management plans.

"One of the things that really impressed me about her was she came in with a clear idea not just focused on individual problems, such as not properly protecting tree roots during construction, but understanding how you have to take a systems approach to getting a handle on those things," he said. That approach will make the rules easier to understand and follow. "And she and [chairman] Tom Leverone know each other and will work well together."

On the community activities and cultural commission, Burnett and Talmage selected Kristy Downing to replace Donna Jett, whose term expires in 2015. Downing, a financial advisor and CRA member, has experience in charitable event planning, fundraising, volunteering and volunteer coordinating. She also enjoys working with groups toward a common goal, such as revitalizing downtown, and Burnett said she "brings a huge amount of energy and a ton of great ideas."

"It's not that some of these projects aren't worthy, but whether it's the right time, given the economy," she said.

Hale said the board has not responded to her, except for Karl Pallastrini, who has also doubted the logic of asking voters to approve more debt.

CUSD superintendent Marvin Biasotti objected to the allegation of mismanagement.

"There's no other single issue that the board has spent more time on and given careful scrutiny to than the expenditure of bond funds and attention to every detail of

"CARMEL LEGENDS"

How does one connect a lady, whose lifelong habit has been anonymity, with the stuff of which legends are made? Well, one way is to relate her story to her husband's career. Such a woman is KAY LAWS, who has lived alone in a charming cottage on Carmel Point for almost 20 years, since her husband Clarence L. Laws, passed on in 1971. No one recognized him as "Clarence", of course, but everyone knows him as "Brick" ... BRICK LAWS. A Cal-Berkeley man, he had two passions in life: the theater and baseball. And he made both of them work! His theatrical career sounds like Horatio Alger: started as an usher at the old T & D Theater in Oakland, rose to become its manager, bought in and wound up as co-owner (with partner Joe Blumenfeld) of a chain of United Artists Theatres. His career in baseball was even more spectacular. He and Joe bought a piece of the Oakland Oaks, the power in the Pacific Coast league and a pantheon of baseball greats. Among his managers were Augie Galan, Mel Ott, Charlie Dressen and Casey Stengel who, Kay recalls, was a non-stop talker. Their honeymoon in 1924 was at the World Series in New York! On my desk is a little plaque which says, "Behind every successful (sic) man is a working woman." That's KAY, and there are others like her in this legendary town: legends behind legends.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

You may examine the file kept by the court. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, this information can be obtained from one of the following two companies: LPS Agency Sales & Posting at (714) 730-2727, or visit the Internet Web site www.lpsasap.com (Registration required to search for sale information) or Priority Posting & Publishing at (714) 573-1965 or visit the Internet Web site www.priorityposting.com (Click on the link for "Advanced Search" to search for sale information), using the Trustee Sale No. shown above. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. P949551 5/18, 5/25, 6/1, 6/8/2012
