As storms stack up, Big Sur residents prepare for the worst

By CHRIS COUNTS

IF THE predictions of weather forecasters come true, Big Sur could be buried in mud by this time next week.

That's because a strong Pineapple Express is headed this way — and it appears to have the Monterey County coast in its sights.

“By Saturday, moderate to heavy rainfall could return to Big Sur,” said Matt Mehle, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service. “That’s going to continue Sunday, and possibly, into Monday.”

Mehle told The Pine Cone that so far this season, Big Sur residents have been fortunate. With many of its hillsides stripped bare of vegetation by last summer’s Soberanes Fire, the risk of mudslides is great.

“We’ve seen no major problems so far,” Mehle reported. “We’ve had a few storms, but in grand scheme of things, we’ve been pretty lucky.” But that could change if the next storm brings enough rain.

“The ground is saturated, and we’re going to be putting a lot more rain on top of it,” explained Mehle, who said 10 inches of rain was recorded over a 36-hour period at a Big Sur weather station earlier this week.

So far, Big Sur residents have experienced fallen trees, falling rocks, clogged culverts, power outages, flooded parking areas and road closures as heavy rains battered the coast.

“There’s either a train passing in Palo Colorado, or it’s raining really hard,” resident Jeremy Slate posted Jan. 4 on

Panetta sworn in, challenge of job begins

By KELLY NIX
REPORTING FROM WASHINGTON

WITH HIS father, Leon, and two young daughters, Siri and Gia, by his side, Jimmy Panetta took the oath of office at the U.S. Capitol Tuesday, becoming the Monterey Peninsula’s congressional representative and embarking on a two-year term that promises to be highly eventful as Republicans and Democrats jockey to advance their agendas with a very unpredictable President Donald Trump in the White House.

The 47-year-old Panetta, an attorney and Democrat who handily defeated Republican Casey Lucius last November, succeeds Congressman Sam Farr, who retired after two dozen years in the role. In an interview with The Pine Cone in a very noisy corridor just outside the floor of the House of Representatives Tuesday afternoon, Panetta talked candidly about his first day as a lawmaker, and weighed in other topics, including the Affordable Care Act, Trump, immigration, and working with Republicans.

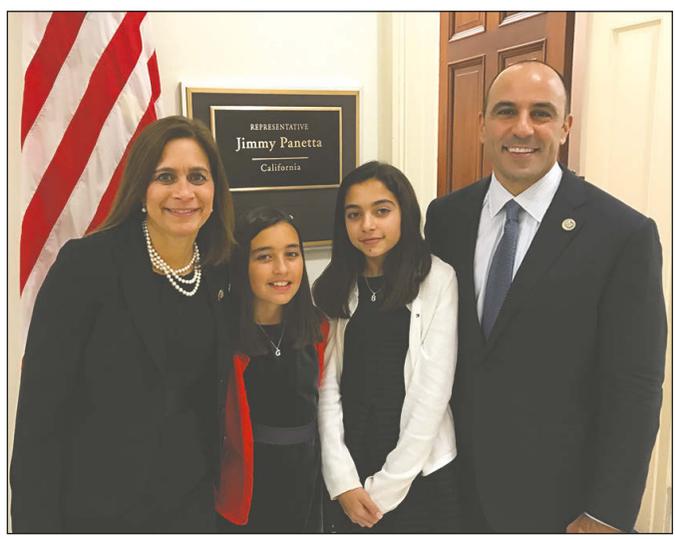

A humbling moment

Panetta said being sworn in as a member of the 115th Congress — in the same chamber that has hosted some of the most momentous legislative events in the nation’s history — was “humbling.” His mother, Sylvia, wife, Carrie, and his in-laws also watched the ceremony.

“It was a proud moment individually, and it was a proud moment for my family, my father, and most of all, my daughters,” who are 10 and 12 years old, Panetta told The Pine Cone. “What is amazing is you see them quickly learn and develop a knowledge about what is going on politically and party-wise.”

No longer a “member-elect,” Panetta — whose new office is in Room 228 of the Cannon Building next to the Capitol — said the realization he’ll play a part in creating,

Tomasi, a 20-year veteran, becomes police chief

By MARY SCHLEY

PAUL TOMASI officially became chief of Carmel Police Department Friday, when his wife, Amy, pinned the new badge to his chest during an informal ceremony at city hall, and outgoing Chief Mike Calhoun attached the “stars and bars” to his collar. Tomasi took the formal oath of office and then “spoke about his leadership tenets: trust, respect and love,” city administrator Chip Rerig said. “It was a very special event.”

With his ascent to the top police job, Tomasi became the city’s 11th chief in its 100-year history, and with that, Calhoun — who followed Chief George Rawson — officially retired.

Tomasi worked in law enforcement at California State University Monterey Bay and in Citrus Heights before being hired as a sergeant by Carmel in 2008. He was promoted to commander in January 2013, and when Calhoun was serving as interim city administrator following Doug Schmitz’ retirement in October 2015, Tomasi was effectively running the police department. He also oversaw public works for several months, until Rob Mullane was tapped to run it.

At the ceremony, Tomasi said he described the “three pillars I follow for success,” which he developed throughout his career.

Big baby

ZEPHYR IS a big, black German shepherd-Newfoundland mix who has just turned 2. Since he is the same breed as the big, sweet, lovable family dog his person had before, when she brought home the little puppy with the cute face and big paws, she thought she would also be getting the same personality.

But Zephyr only looks similar to his predecessor. Now 80 pounds, he's strong and imposing, but also nervous, neurotic, skittish and scared.

Zephyr was adopted from a rescue organization in Southern California. His person picked him because she was preparing to move to a house in Monterey with a large yard and plenty of room to raise a big dog.

"At first, I wanted a dog whose temperament I could already tell, so I knew I could easily take him everywhere with me," she said. "And, when I saw Zephyr's picture, I absolutely fell in love with him."

But no two dogs are the same. Zephyr, rescued from a breeding and hoarding situation, started out by hiding under a table when people came to visit. But she has taken him to a lot of training classes and has been slowly but surely working to reassure him and take him out of his fears.

Zephyr loves to go to Carmel and Asilomar beaches, and heads straight for the water upon arrival. He watches other dogs from afar and then, once he gets used to them, joins right in the fun. He's the same with people. Once they become familiar, his person said, he's just a big baby, all mushy and cuddly.

Most of all, Zephyr loves his person. Plus his security toy, a stuffed fish. So much so, his person bought him two. "I'm scared that if one goes missing, he'll just die," she said.

Bee talk at Carpenter Hall

IF YOU'RE interested in helping out your friendly neighborhood honey bees, come on down to Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center on Wednesday, Jan. 11, for a talk by UC Berkeley biologist Gordon Frankie.

The lecture, titled "Bees and Blooms, A Guide for Gardeners and Naturalists," will address California's remarkable 1,600 species of wild bees, pollination and Colony Collapse Disorder — the mysterious demise of entire hives that scientists have been tracking since the early 2000s.

Frankie has been documenting bees and their behavior for more than 20 years. He's currently involved in five separate studies of bees and other insects that help with pollination, including one to develop information on planting bee-friendly gardens. He is also co-author of the book, "California Bees & Blooms."

Proceeds from the event will benefit Carmel Public Library. It's free and open to the public, but a $10 donation is suggested. For more information, call (831) 624-2811.

Council adopts new rules for permits

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CITY council voted 4-1 on Tuesday to make it more difficult for people to open cosmetic shops, liquor stores, tasting rooms, community centers and conference facilities in town. At the Jan. 3 meeting, council members decided to change those types of businesses from permitted uses — which the city is obligated to allow — to conditional uses, meaning the planning commission has discretion over whether they can operate in town, and can impose certain requirements on them if they do.

The changes come in part as a response to complaints about the new skin care stores on Ocean Avenue, where sales people standing in doorways constantly offer samples to passersby and have also been known to step out onto the sidewalk — a violation of city rules — or to otherwise aggressively push their expensive wares. Previously, the city had to approve permits for such businesses, but with the change in the law, it will now have a say.

“The city is obligated to approve a permitted use through the business license process, so long as the business meets the zoning requirements and code definition of the use. The use is approved without a requirement to go before the planning commission, and special conditions cannot be applied,” city planner Marc Wiener explained in his report to the council. “The majority of businesses in Carmel, such as clothing stores, art galleries, offices, etc., are classified as permitted uses.”

But, he said, planners need to ensure a new business “will not conflict with the city’s goal of achieving and maintaining a balanced mix of uses that serve the needs of both local and non-local populations.”

Last month, the planning commission voted to recommend the council change the requirements for cosmetic stores, tasting rooms and a few other categories, as well as amend the code to include bicycle rentals.

Bike shops weren’t previously identified in the code, which complicated matters when Ryan and Jill Bell applied for a business license to open Carmel e-Bikes in the former Mail Mart space on Dolores Street in June. The planning commission generally supported the idea of a bike-rental business, but wanted a say in where and when and how.

Councilwoman Jan Reimers objected to the idea of allowing bicycle shops in the city. She admitted that seeing a “horrible accident” involving a cyclist on 17 Mile Drive colored her perspective, but regardless, she said, “I just feel I cannot vote for the right for someone, even with a conditional use permit, to come in en masse to ride bicycles.”

Councilwoman Carrie Theis, who rides a bike, argued that people are also at risk when they’re driving and walking.

“I don’t cross the street without looking at the whites of people’s eyes,” she said. “I personally would love to see a bicycle shop in Carmel, so we definitely have opposing view about this.”

Councilman Bobby Richards agreed with Theis, and also noted that Mayor Steve Dallas has been advocating for a path connecting Pebble Beach to the area south of the city limits.

Councilwoman Carolyn Hardy moved approval of the new permit requirements, as well as a new classification for temporary uses so businesses can host multi-day events, and a rule that three affirmative votes, not four, will be required for conditional use permits. The motion passed 4-1, with Reimers dissenting.

Codes and licenses

Also on Tuesday, the council approved state-required changes to the California Building Standards, which regulate fire, electrical, plumbing, mechanical and other building-related codes. Individual jurisdictions are allowed to make amendments to the Council OKs $$$ for chamber, events

Hardy wants town to have scarecrow event

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CHAMBER of commerce on Tuesday finally received the second half of the $55,000 in tax dollars the city council authorized in the 2016/2017 budget last summer — but not without a fight.

When the budget was being deliberated, council members voted to allocate the money, but not to let the chamber have it until they were satisfied with how it would be used. After a workshop in July 2016, the council released half the funds, “and directed staff to continue to work with the chamber on efforts that highlight the unique visitor and hospitality assets of Carmel-by-the-Sea,” city administrator Chip Rerig said at the Jan. 3 meeting.

Since then, the chamber has been working closely with council members Carrie Theis and Bobby Richards, with a goal of supporting all businesses in town, not just those who pay membership dues.

“The relationship between the city and chamber continues to improve, and we are working in close partnership to celebrate the attributes of the village and encourage visitors to return,” Rerig said. “We expect collaboration to continue, and for the relationship to continue to positively evolve.”

He also noted the chamber board developed an extensive outline of actions it would take to better support business and tourism in town, including listing all businesses on its website, developing an information packet for new businesses, bolstering its volunteers at the visitors center in the Carmel Plaza and its ambassadors’ outreach to downtown businesses, developing a sustainable tourism program in collaboration with the Carmel Residents Association, implementing a buy-local program, and continuing to host educational seminars.

As a result, Rerig recommended releasing the rest of the money. But councilwoman Carolyn Hardy was resistant.

First of all, she said, when the chamber requested the money last spring, it was to be used to run the visitors center. “And now, this discussion is revolving around all of these things that they should have done and should be doing — it’s almost like the emphasis is shifting,” she said.

Hardy also lamented the lackluster holi-

SPCA awaiting firstborn of 2017

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE SO far no kitten, puppy, kid or foal has laid claim to being the first of its species to be born in the new year, a surprising number of animals entered the world over the holidays at the SPCA for Monterey County.

The most recent came Dec. 27, when a mama goat named Olga gave birth to a pair of youngsters, Smitty and Jamie.

"They're stinkin' adorable," declared Beth Brookhouser of the nonprofit animal welfare group. The mother, Brookhouser explained, "was rescued by humane officers from a long life of neglect."

Six days earlier, on Dec. 21, the SPCA staff delivered a litter of four kittens and another of three puppies. The shortest day of the year was a busy one at SPCA.

The animal welfare group constantly takes in stray and unwanted animals, and some of them are pregnant when they arrive. Last year alone, 62 kittens and 20 puppies were born at the facility on Highway 68.

Brookhouser said she doesn't anticipate any trouble finding homes for the new kittens and puppies. But people interested in adopting one will have to wait until they're eight weeks old.

The young are kept from the public's view during those eight weeks, in part for safety reasons. "Mamas can be a little protective when their babies are that little," Brookhouser explained.

Delivering kittens and puppies isn't the primary mission of the SPCA, which is focused on finding homes for them. But Brookhouser said it's preferable that stray pets give birth to their young at the SPCA rather than on the streets and back alleys of the county. She said their survival rates — and the survival rates of their young — are much higher in captivity.

Besides goats, cats and dogs, a remarkable variety of animals pass through the SPCA. When asked what kinds of animals, Brookhouser responded with, "You name it."

"We have lots of parrots, some snakes, and quite a few exotic birds — if it's legal to own it in California, the chances are that we have it," she said. "We have 14 horses in our care, including seven that are available for adoption now."

There's also a bearded dragon lizard in the mix. And there's even a guinea pig named Peanut Butter.

Foster families needed

The animal welfare group, of course, is always trying to find homes for pets, including ones in the care of volunteers.

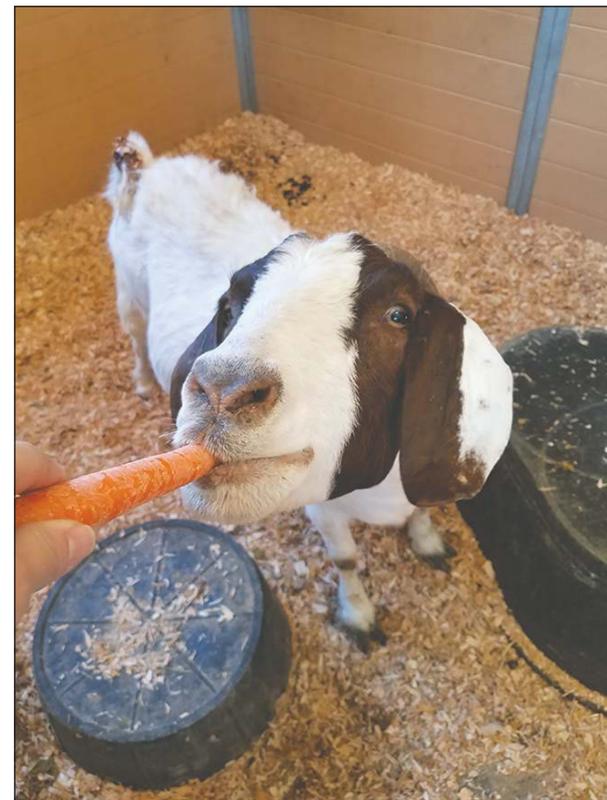

"If people really want to help us out, they can sign up for our foster program," Brookhouser said.

The SPCA's staff will provide those who want to foster animals with the necessary training.

"We want to give people all the tools they need to be successful," she explained.

It should come as no surprise that a certain percentage of foster pet parents become permanent pet owners when they become attached to the animals they care for. But Brookhouser said that's a good thing, and she affectionately refers to such arrangements as a "foster failures."

For more about the SPCA's foster program, call (831) 373-2631 or visit <http://www.spcamc.org/volunteer>.

Flood work could get done in 2017, but only if subdivision moves forward

By CHRIS COUNTS

WITH RAIN falling this week, and more on the way, residents in some of Carmel Valley's most flood-prone neighborhoods are again nervously watching the Carmel River, which flooded homes in 1995 and 1998. But if all goes according to plan — and flood control measures promised by developer Alan Williams and his partner, Clint Eastwood, are implemented — their worries could become a thing of the past by this time next year.

As part of his plan to sell 130 unbuilt lots — including 25 reserved for affordable housing — on land in Carmel Valley where Rancho Cañada's West Course was once located, Williams proposed extending and building up a fire road that would serve as a barrier to keep floodwaters from coming down Rio Road.

Because there are so many restrictions on building in Carmel Valley, Williams faced an uphill battle getting his subdivision approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, although they finally OK'd it Dec. 14. Along the way, he found a surprising ally in resident Margaret Robbins, an outspoken opponent of development in the area.

'Rolling down Rio Road'

"I've been doing land use for 25 years, and this is the first project I've ever supported," Robbins told The Pine Cone. "Alan and I haven't always been on the same side of issues."

But Robbins backed Williams' Rancho Cañada proposal, in large part because of its flood control measures. Her home was nearly flooded in 1995. "The water came rolling down Rio Road, and it came within an inch of my dining room," she recalled.

It wasn't easy for Robbins to endorse a subdivision that the Carmel Valley Association opposed. A longtime member of the land use watchdog group, Robbins didn't go into details, but she did say she is no longer one of its board members.

Council OKs $180K in extended contracts

By MARY SCHLEY

CODE ENFORCEMENT officer Al Fasulo will get another $32,000 to make sure businesses and residents are following the rules, Wildan Engineering will be paid $74,800 more to continue inspecting buildings and checking plans, and Viva International will get $37,000 and Krista Brassfield will receive $36,000 for continuing to manage public works projects. The extended contracts were approved by the city council at its Jan. 3 meeting.

This year's municipal budget includes money for an in-house code enforcement officer, but the city has never hired one. Meanwhile, Fasulo's previous contract expired Dec. 31, so planning director Marc Wiener recommended extending it for another six months and another $32,000. It provides for an average of 25 hours of work per week.

The city is also looking to hire a new building official, but in the meantime, Wiener recommended keeping Wildan on the job, doing "plan checks and inspections, reviews discretionary applications for compliance with construction codes, and compiles monthly reports to the state and other governmental agencies." The additional $74,800 brings its total to $135,700, including 24 hours of work per week until June 30.

The revised contracts with Viva International and Brassfield will help address the backlog of capital projects, "and keep momentum on several projects initiated by the city's capital projects manager [Andy Vanderford] before his unanticipated departure," last summer, public works director Rob Mullane noted.

Viva's owner, Lisa Leo, is working on addressing heating and air conditioning issues at the library buildings, and has helped with other issues like hiring tree service contractors. Her contract now totals $59,500 and extends to the end of June.

Brassfield, meanwhile, has been helping with projects at Mission Trail park, the police department, Sunset Center, San Antonio Avenue and the beach, and Mullane said her contract should be upped to a total of $60,000, and also extended to June 30.

What's an FAO? And why are so many headed here? So glad you asked.

By ELAINE HESSER

LATER THIS month, the Monterey Peninsula will be hosting 75 high-ranking military officers in the first stages of their training as Foreign Area Officers — a position that's little known in the civilian world, but plays a key role in this country's foreign affairs.

According to Col. Roger Bowman, who directs the U.S. Army Foreign Area Officer Program at the Presidio of Monterey, a Foreign Area Officer is a military officer from any of the four branches of service, who is also a diplomat with an incredibly broad array of skills.

The most familiar job you might see one fulfill is that of a military attaché — a high-ranking military officer who works in one of the United States' embassies abroad.

Alternatively, he might advise military commanders in a particular region of the world on matters of culture or security.

For example, if there were such an officer to Carmel, he'd likely tell his ambassador not to bring up the beach fire controversy, or tramp around in heels without a permit.

"The Army has the longest standing Foreign Area Officer program," said Bowman. In fact, the practice of using military attachés dates to 1889, when the United States sent officers to Paris, London, Vienna and Saint Petersburg, in Russia.

All Foreign Area Officers, regardless of branch of service, start their training at a Joint Foreign Area Officer Course at the Presidio of Monterey, and the next week-long session will be from Jan. 23-27. Bowman said Army officers who come to the training are usually captains with six to eight years of experience, including some time as company commanders.

Mastering language

The training will include an orientation to the job, including topics like learning to become competent in other countries' cultures and the regional areas and roles in which the officers might serve. There's also an orientation for spouses, which Bowman said provides training on "how to live overseas in a diplomatic environment."

After that week, almost all of the officers will complete foreign language training at DLI. Bowman's office will shepherd them through the process and bring in expert speakers from the community and throughout the world to augment their training.

This year's speakers have included Ryan Gingeras, an associate professor from the Naval Postgraduate School, who spoke on recent events in Turkey. Dr. Sharad Joshi, an associate professor from Middlebury Institute of International Studies in Monterey, who gave a presentation on Pakistani-Indian relations.

Earlier in the year, Frank Archibald, a former director of the Central Intelligence Agency National Clandestine Service, spoke to officers about the importance of foreign language and cultural mastery in the age of technology.

In addition to mastering a language — or sometimes multiple languages — officers will also earn a master's degree, typically at the Naval Postgraduate School.

Before starting their jobs, they'll be sent to the region where they'll be working for a one-year immersion in the area and its culture. They'll become experts on the region's geography, and will receive additional training in their specific assignments.

According to Bowman, that experience is usually relatively unstructured. His own time in Europe included brief stints at embassies in Kazakhstan and Ukraine.

An Arroyo Carmel resident, Michael Boudreau, said he bought his home not long after the 1995 flood, and he was evacuated in the middle of the night during the 1998 event. Boudreau called the threat of flood, “a looming presence,” and said he’s thankful the Rancho Cañada subdivision was approved. He also predicted the project’s flood control measures will be completed before the $25 million Carmel River FREE project — which will offer additional flood protection in the area — gets built. The public project currently lacks the funding needed to complete it.

Work to protect 400 homes

Williams, meanwhile, suggested residents today would be enjoying flood protection — if his development had been approved two years ago. “It’s my goal, pending any delays, to have flood protection in place by this time next year,” he said. Before doing the work, Williams will first need to get county officials to sign off on it. Once the area dries out in the spring, he plans to reinforce the fire road so it can serve as a levy and prevent flood waters from coming down Rio Road. A culvert that can be opened or closed will allow water to pass through the levy.

Besides building up the fire road, Williams wants to install an 84-inch that will take water from the north side of Carmel Valley Road across from Carmel Middle School and move that water to a place where it can be stored near the river.

“We’re going to dig out the old fairways on the south side of the [former] West Course to create additional retention basins,” Williams explained. “They’ll be able to hold all of our runoff plus an additional three million cubic feet of water. They’re like ponds. They’ll fill up and dry up. They will also create habitat for red-legged frogs.”

To meet his goal of completing the flood control work by next winter, Williams will need to avoid a lengthy court battle — which is no sure thing given how often people sue over local development — particularly in Carmel Valley.

If Williams does get sued over the subdivision and it gets delayed, the flood control work will also be postponed.

“It’s all part of the same project,” he said. “The overall project is funding the [flood control] improvements.”

Once completed, the flood control measures will make the community much safer, Williams said. “The bottom line is: 400 houses, 1,000 people and over 100 businesses would come out of the 100-year flood plain.”

modifying and approving laws that will likely affect millions of Americans, has definitely set in.

"Each time I walk from Cannon to the Capitol building, and I see the dome, I feel like the weight of it is on my shoulders," Panetta said. "But that gives me the energy to continue walking up the steps to the House floor to do my job for the people of the Central Coast."

Panetta's Tuesday was intense, including multiple trips between his office and the Capitol building, interspersed with things like a reception with sandwiches and cookies, squeezing in press queries, and other tasks. Later in the day, he posed with his family and friends, including Cannery Row businessman Ted Balestreri, for a mock swearing-in photograph with Republican congressman and newly elected Speaker of the House Paul Ryan from Wisconsin.

Common ground

His first day on the floor of the House was also anything but mundane. Even before the 435 members of Congress took the oath of office, Democrats protested new rules intended to prevent them from taking photographs and video on the floor. In June 2016, Democrats staged a day-long sit-in in the chamber to protest lack of action on gun control measures they wanted, and live-streamed photos and video to try to bolster their public support. The new rules were meant to stop them from doing it again.

During the largely symbolic vote for speaker, many Democrats announced their vote with the preamble, "Because the people's House should be ethical, accountable and open to free debate ... I vote for Nancy Pelosi!" Some Democratic Party leaders, including Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz and Rep. Maxine Waters, made more elaborate objections.

Republicans' response to the spectacle, at first, was disapproving boos, heckling and even a condescending, "Yeah, yeah, yeah." One GOP lawmaker — in casting his vote for incumbent speaker Ryan — responded with, "Because the people's House should be in order; Paul Ryan." Ryan, predictably, was reelected.

Panetta, however, didn't participate in the antics. While he didn't elaborate on the grandstanding by his colleagues, he explained his reason for not joining in.

"As a new member, I respect the institution, and I want to continue to show as much decorum as I can," he said. "I can't speak about the others."

In a deeply fragmented Washington, Panetta said repeatedly during his campaign that he intends to find common ground with Republicans, telling The Pine Cone in a previous interview that Ryan is someone he believes Democrats could "work with."

"I hear the dissatisfaction about the dysfunction," Panetta said Tuesday. "The most promising thing I can tell you is that every single Republican I've met and have heard from is saying the same thing: They have heard from constituents that it's time to reach across the aisle and get things done. And I am here to get things done."

While skeptics might chalk up his bridge-building remarks to the bright-eyed optimism of a freshman lawmaker, the connections Panetta's made through his father, Leon, the former CIA director, secretary of defense, and congressman, will undoubtedly help him find accord with opposing members. He's also charismatic, and whether he likes it or not, the most famous new member of the 115th Congress — factors that will only benefit him.

To that, Tuesday's interview with Panetta in the hallway was interrupted several times as exuberant Republicans and Democrats exiting the House chamber took time to greet Panetta with embraces, hand shakes and chit-chat. Even family members of representatives appeared excited to meet him.

Trump, Obama and immigration

But with a Trump administration getting underway in just two weeks, anything is possible. Many House and Senate members, lobbyists and others can't quite wrap their heads around the rebellious businessman leading the country, and are on pins and needles about the road ahead.

Panetta is no different, saying he doesn't know what Trump "stands for," and wondering about his party affiliation.

"I can't necessarily say he's Republican, and I can't necessarily say he's a Democrat," Panetta said. He also offered that Trump should avoid social media.

"Donald Trump will be president of the United States, and obviously, I respect that position and the fact that he will be the leader," Panetta said. "At the same time, he has to act like it. He basically needs to stop tweeting and start working."

Looking for a New Eye Doctor in 2017?

I had my first new patient visit today. No one waited in the waiting room longer than 5 minutes other than me (~15 minutes) and I was doing all the new patient paperwork. I was taken back to the room and had a friendly staff member do my initial work up. Within 5-10 minutes the doctor was with me. He was knowledgeable and friendly and all his recommendations coincided with my previous doctor I had before I moved. I have a unique condition so he asked if his colleague could look at my eyes as well. She was also friendly and professional. I look forward to seeing them for my routine visits!

In a room adjacent to the U.S. Capitol's Statuary Hall – the location of the Father Junipero Serra statue – new congressman Jimmy Panetta recreated his official swearing-in with House Speaker Paul Ryan. Panetta's family and friends were in attendance.

Trump will be sworn in on the Capitol's West Front Jan. 20, and some Democratic leaders, such as Waters, say they don't intend to work with him. Even New York Sen. Chuck Schumer said Tuesday that Democrats would fight any Supreme Court nominee who's out of the "mainstream."

Panetta also commented on the sanctions President Barack Obama recently imposed on Russia over what intelligence officials maintain was that country's hacking into email accounts at the Democratic National Committee.

"I think there had to have been a response to the hacking that we had evidence of based on our intelligence sources," said Panetta, a Bronze Star recipient who worked as an intelligence analyst with the United States Navy Reserve when he was deployed to Afghanistan in support of Operation Enduring Freedom in 2007. "I understand why [Obama] did it, but I think it could have been done a little sooner."

'It just needs to be fixed'

And with a showdown imminent over changes to Obamacare, Panetta was adamant that provisions in the Affordable Care Act pertaining to existing conditions and mental health services should be retained. But, he conceded, the plan needs tweaking. Trump has also said the pre-existing condition provision should remain.

"The ACA shouldn't be repealed, but I do think it needs to be repaired," Panetta said. "In the Central Coast, prices have gone up nearly 30 percent. It's getting ridiculously expensive. All in all, what it's done — given that 20 million people have gained insurance — is amazing. It should be kept; it just needs to be fixed."

As for immigration, perhaps the most contentious issue of them all, Panetta said he thinks the "border does need to be secured," but wouldn't say whether he thought a wall, like Trump has proposed, should be built. A wall, he said, isn't "immigration reform," and he has proposed changes in the visa process.

"It's our job to make sure we have immigration reform," he said.

Sleeping, eating and getting around

Panetta — like all newcomers to the maze-like Capitol building and the House and Senate offices connected via underground tunnels — has found the place to be something of a labyrinth. To pass through the security checkpoints, Panetta was issued a single congressional lapel pin that members use as a form of identification.

Because he'll be a transient lawmaker, bouncing back and forth between Washington and Carmel Valley, Panetta decided to lease an apartment off Capitol Hill with two other new congressional Democrats — Tom Suozzi of New York and Josh Gottheimer of New Jersey — to cut down costs.

"It's a two-bedroom, and someone gets the den," Panetta said. "I think Josh signed up for the den, but he pays a lower rent."

His dad had a similar arrangement with Schumer and former Congressman Marty Russo, who lived together in a townhouse on Capitol Hill owned by longtime California Congressman George Miller, who retired in 2015.

"I lived there for six months on the full-sized bed with my dad," Panetta said. "I saw the bond they all developed back then because they lived together."

Asked whether his father had recommended any noteworthy restaurants around Capitol Hill, Panetta again turned the conversation to party peacemaking.

"There is this Chinese food place on Independence Avenue my dad told me about," Panetta said. "He said the food wasn't that good, but it was the place where Democrats and Republicans would eat at night and get to know each other. I look forward to going."

Actors Amy Treadwell, Bruce Wagner and Robert Chestnut review a tricky will in "Ghosts Galore: The Mystery of the Macawber Mansion." The play will raise money for the Monterey Symphony's Music for the Schools program.

WHILE AWAY A WINTER'S EVENING AND PLAY DETECTIVE, ALL FOR A GOOD CAUSE

By ELAINE HESSER

IT'S THAT time again — time for another original whodunit by local psychiatrist, Frisbee enthusiast and author Stencil Johnson to hit the stages at the Portola Hotel and Hartnell College. Both performances will benefit Monterey Symphony's Music for the Schools program, which includes visits to classrooms by musicians, and full-orchestra concerts for children.

On Jan. 28, the Salinas performance at the Main Stage at Hartnell will begin with a reception featuring wine and small bites at 4:15 p.m., followed by the debut performance of "Ghosts Galore: The Mystery of the Macawber Mansion."

The following week, Feb. 4, a dinner theater version will be presented in the DeAnza Ballroom at the Portola Hotel, starting with a no-host cocktail hour at 5 p.m., dinner at 6 p.m. and the play at 7 p.m.

As always, the Salinas audience members will be on their honor not to share their answers with any of their Peninsula counterparts.

This is the eighth year that the Friends of the Monterey Symphony have hosted the mystery fundraiser, in which audience members vie for bottles of bubbly by trying to deduce details of the crime during the intermission.

This is Johnson's fifth original work for the occasion, including such memorable dramas as "Pshaw! on the Hawkshaw Society" and "The Penniless Pirate."

Event co-producer Marcia Hayes said "The cast has been furiously rehearsing three nights a week." She said the show was set in 1923, in Gross Pointe Shores, Mich., where a farm equipment manufacturer has become a millionaire during World War

Council revamps policy for handing out cash

By MARY SCHLEY

IN THE past, when it has come time for the council to discuss how the city should spend the public's money in the annual budget, local nonprofits have submitted requests and pleaded their cases during public meetings, arguing why they, perhaps to the exclusion of others, should receive some. But all that will change this year, the city council decided Tuesday, when it adopted a new, more formal, "discretionary funds grant program." Now, groups will have to adhere to certain guidelines.

According to the new policy, recipients must be nonprofits or schools, and provide descriptions of "how the funded activity will benefit the community." If they get the money, they then submit reports after the fact explaining how the cash was used to specifically benefit Carmel-by-the-Sea.

"The grant program creates a process that provides an equal opportunity for interested community services providers to request funds, uses evaluation criteria to assist in making funding decisions and to clearly identify the proposed community benefit associated with the receipt of city funds, demonstrates transparency and accountability in the use of public funds by requiring a written report on the expenditures of the grant funds, and uses a consistent approach to grant funding," community services director Janet Bombard said in her report.

While Bombard recommended the council hold a workshop on grant requests, Mayor Steve Dallas suggested a sub-committee of a couple of council members and a few others review the applications and then make recommendations to the full council. That process, he suggested, would be more expeditious and would avoid having the groups and all their advocates speaking at public meetings.

According to the timeline adopted by the council at its Jan. 3 meeting, the application period will open Jan. 20, they will be due March 3, and the requests will be considered by the committee thereafter. The council is set to have a budget workshop on May 1 and to possibly adopt it June 6.

I by switching over to turning out munitions.

He commits suicide after his sons go missing in the war, and his will specifies that only a blood relative who can spend two consecutive nights in his now-haunted mansion, may inherit it. With a passel of characters with mixed motives — including Henry Ford — plot twists, and musical numbers, it promises to be an entertaining evening.

In addition to the prizes for solving the mystery, guests at the Portola event can bid on a custom mystery party for themselves and their friends, with some of the actors from the show and catering by a local chef.

Lucretia Butler will be directing the play for the fifth year in a row, and the cast includes Peninsula favorites Theodore Balestreri Jr., Amy Treadwell, Doug Toby and Taylor Safina. Cameos by local notables like Bashar Sneh, Sylvia Gardner and Maddox Haberdasher are sure to enliven the performance. Musical direction will be provided by Barney Hulse.

Attendees at the Portola performance will enjoy a three-course dinner, and dressing in 1920s attire "or as your favorite ghost," is highly encouraged. Menu options include a chili-rubbed beef file, grilled chicken, salmon and a vegetarian Wellington. Dessert is something called "Mr. Boogedy's Fresh Fruit Tart."

Tickets for the Hartnell performance start at $25, with discounts for active duty military and students. For the Monterey performance, they start at $125. For more information or to purchase tickets, visit www.montereysymphony.org/specialevents, or call (831) 646-8511.

“He struck a garbage can that hit a parked car, and a mailbox that hit another parked car,” and then crashed into a Hyundai that ended up crushed and overturned on a Toyota, Johnson said. “When all was said and done, he caused damage to five cars.”

Remarkably, Barua, who had been at a wedding at Mission Ranch and was returning to his hotel, escaped with little more than a bloody nose and some facial scratches.

Two fire engines and an ambulance responded to the crash, as did the California Highway Patrol, which investigated the collision and evaluated Barua for DUI, since the wreck occurred just outside the city limits.

CHP public information officer Oscar Loza said Barua admitted he was the driver — a fact corroborated by witnesses who had seen him in the driver’s seat of the BMW — and was subsequently arrested for DUI. He was taken to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula by ambulance, where he was cleared of any injuries, and was then taken to Monterey County Jail.

“He was clearly intoxicated. I’ve been doing this job a pretty long time, when it comes to DUIs, and it was very quickly obvious,” Johnson said. “I haven’t seen a crash with that much destruction... It looked like a grenade had gone off. There was debris everywhere.”

The speed Barua is believed to have been driving is strikingly high for a residential road. Many residents in that area have long complained of people driving too fast as they enter and exit the city, and Johnson noted that he recently ticketed a woman driving a Mercedes after he clocked her at 52 mph.

The speed Barua was driving was “a very high rate of speed on a residential street that’s posted at 25 mph,” Johnson said. “He’s lucky he didn’t kill himself.”

Gautam Barua walked away from the wreckage that had been his 2016 BMW, after he totaled two parked cars, damaged two more, and ended up in the front yard of a Rio Road home.

Finalists in CUSD search to be interviewed

NEARLY 20 people applied for the position of Carmel Unified School District superintendent — a position that’s been held by popular interim Karen Hendricks since Scott Lawrence left last spring after a very brief tenure — board President John Ellison told district parents last month. Leadership Associates, the firm that found Lawrence and agreed to conduct another search because he didn’t work out, reported that 27 people requested applications, and 19 candidates submitted them. Of those, nine are women, and 10 are men, with three from outside California.

“The Carmel school board is looking forward to the rest of the process, which will include reviewing all of the applications, choosing and interviewing the finalists, making a selection of the top candidate, and finally, a site visit to the top candidate’s district/community,” Ellison said. “Following the site visit, the board will approve the contract of employment and appoint the new superintendent at a regularly scheduled board meeting.”

Trustees discussed the candidates with Peggy Lynch from Leadership Associates via phone during a closed session Wednesday, and according to the timeline the board adopted last September, finalists should be selected and interviewed Jan. 13 and 14. The top candidates are set to be interviewed the week of Jan. 23, with the site visit and contract offer occurring in February. The new superintendent could start work as soon as the end of next month.

ARTIST GETS EVERYBODY'S ATTENTION, FEMALE PHOTOGRAPHERS LOOK AT MEN

A MAN who has been at the center of the dispute over Bruiser the pig, Ray Magsalay will unveil an exhibit, "Face of a Dreamer," Friday, Jan. 6, at the Pacific Grove Art Center.

The display will showcase Magsalay's unusual talent for creating three dimensional artwork from a vast array of objects — a creative genre known as "assemblages."

As an artist, Magsalay says has no intention of making painting with a fervor; it became a means for assimilating and processing the experience — and helping me appreciate and feel confidence in my style of artistic expression."

The art center, which will host a reception from 7 to 9 p.m., is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. The shows will continue through Feb. 23.

something that blends into the background or simply complements other artwork.

"My art is controversial," his artist's statement reads. "If I don't get your attention, I'm not making art."

Magsalay certainly got attention when he complained that his neighbor's pet pig, Bruiser, was stinking up the neighborhood. He lodged a complaint with the city, which sided with him. As a result, Bruiser now lives in Castroville.

Magsalay has long marched to the beat of a different drummer. But he sees himself less as a rebel and more as an explorer.

"This is an exhibit of inventions, showing my passion for things that are different," he said. "In junior high I painted my shoes bright red. It is with this sense of exploration that I want the viewer to look closely at my work."

Also opening Jan. 6 are exhibits by The California Society of Printmakers ("Mirrored Images"), photographer Steve Zmak ("Expressions of Infinity"), painter Susann E. Cate Lynn ("Steps Along the Way") and the students of painter Julie Heilman, who teaches classes for children at the art center.

Lynn credited a recent trip to Spain with inspiring her most recent work.

"A year and a half ago, I went backpacking on the Camino de Santiago, in Spain," she explained. "The experience affected me deeply. Coming back from that trip, I started

Besides presenting the awards, the arts council provides art education to thousands of Monterey County children each year, many of whom are considered disadvantaged.

“The mission of the Arts Council is to improve the quality of life in our region through the arts,” notes executive director Paulette Lynch. “In our 30 years of service, we have found over and over that the arts are the answer.”

The awards, meanwhile, show examples of how people are using the arts to make their communities better.

“Their vision, talent, passion and dedication create a stronger, healthier and more vibrant community,” Lynch added. “Their unique and powerful stories inspire us all to dig a little deeper and work a little harder for the next generation.”

Highlands' new bar, Folktale's fourth duel, and Philanthropic Foodies

AN EXTENSIVE revamp of the restaurants at the Hyatt Carmel Highlands — in celebration of the storied property's centennial — reached another milestone this week, with the reopening of the bar.

Located off the Sunset Lounge, the bar formerly had patrons sitting with their backs to the expansive ocean view that's visible through the large plate-glass windows.

But with the remodel, the bar was rotated 180 degrees and lowered, making the view the main attraction, not only at the bar itself, but at the adjacent tables.

Although food and beverage manager Bastiaan de Winter said new furniture and

As usual, each chef will be provided with one protein and four common (but not necessarily basic) ingredients "to create a dish that will not just excite your palate, but earn your vote." The ideal dish not only tastes delicious, but incorporates all the ingredients in a way that makes each discernible, even though the result is cohesive. Chefs are not required to use all the additional ingredients, but receive more points in judging if they do. The People's Choice counts for 50 percent, while guest judges award the other 50 percent. In the case of a tie, the contestants have to perform a final task. (Last month, it was a game of giant Jenga.)

■ Playoff Bloodies

Peter B's Brewpub in the Portola Hotel at the foot of Alvarado Street in Monterey may be just the right place to take in the NFL playoffs this month. On Jan. 8, 15 and 22, the brewery and pub will set up a Bloody Mary Bar and invite customers to make their own, just right. The base spirit is Tito's Handmade Vodka from Austin, Texas, and garnishes include peppers, celery, onions — and bacon, of course.

With 18 HD TVs installed throughout the restaurant, plenty of seating, lots of good beer, and an extensive menu, Peter B's is an attractive option for kicking back and catching a game.

The brewpub also has plans for the Super Bowl on Sunday, Feb. 5, from 2 p.m. to close. Have coffee with the cops

HAVE ANY burning questions for law enforcement, like whether your neighbor is allowed to have a rooster, what to do when you see someone suspicious parked on your street, or how to protect yourself or your kids from crime? To counteract the belief that officers are too busy to answer such questions and discuss community issues, Seaside P.D. will host Coffee with a Cop Saturday, Jan. 7, from 9 a.m. to noon, at the Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Co. shop at 880 Broadway Ave. Everyone is invited to attend, ask questions, voice concerns, learn more about the department and its officers, and meet the new chief, Robert Jackson.

"The majority of contacts law enforcement has with the public happen during emergencies, or emotional situations. Those situations are not always the most effective times for relationship building with our community," police officials observed. "Some community members may feel that officers are unapproachable on the street, or are 'too busy to be bothered.' Coffee with a Cop breaks down those barriers and allows for a relaxed, one-on-one interaction."

Coffee with a Cop is a national initiative and "is intended to advance the practice of community policing through improving relationships between police officers and community members, one cup of coffee at a time." On Saturday, the first cup will be on Seaside P.D.

Art, travel or volunteering — this is one woman who's all in

"I JUST want to be useful," said Judy Proud as she sat at a table in a Crossroads coffee shop. "I want to leave the place a little better than it was when I came in."

Although she and her husband, John, have been retired for more than 30 years, she's still working away at that goal. In fact, she recently accepted a spot on the board of closed the business in 2005, she still draws and paints as hobbies. She also loves photography, especially when she and her husband travel. In the past 20 years, Proud figures they've visited 63 countries and have done a few trips around the world.

They've taken the Trans-Siberian Railway through Russia, traveled to Easter Island, gotten snowed in in Morocco, and camped in the Sahara Desert, where it can get surprisingly cold.

"We just kept putting on more and more clothes every day," laughed Proud at the memory.

Her favorite recent trip, however, was an Honor Flight with her husband. The Honor Flight Network is a nonprofit organization that flies veterans to Washington, D.C., and takes them around to all the monuments.

Youth Music Monterey County. She's also been a part of the Monterey Symphony board, as well as the board of the Friends of the Monterey Symphony, where she is the chairperson.

Proud said she believes the arts are an important part of any community, and she enjoys learning and listening. She said, "My skill is organizational. It's all about helping."

That's been true for most of her life. Her first volunteer gig, when she was in her mid-20s, was in the admitting room of the Los Angeles County Hospital on Friday and Saturday nights during the mid-1960s. Later, she worked for the City of Los Angeles in the department of water and power, where she met her husband, who also worked for the city.

They've been married for 36 years, and, said Proud, "We enjoy each other so much. We're together all the time."

They came here from L.A., as do many people. It was 1981. John was contemplating retirement the following year, and knew one thing for certain: He wanted to live somewhere cooler.

The couple took a trip to Pacific Grove, and the first full day they were in town, they decided to move there, went to Bratty Realty, and picked out a home. Then they returned to Los Angeles and rented it out for a year until John's retirement in 1982.

"Five days after his retirement, a moving van pulled up," said Proud.

Since then, "retirement" has included volunteering with Navy Relief at the Naval Postgraduate School, the American Heart Association, the Alzheimer's Association, the Pacific Grove Heritage Society, Monterey Bay Aquarium and Gentrain Society of Monterey Peninsula College.

And in 1987, she and John opened a business and ran it for nearly 20 years, kind of by accident. A friend asked if the couple could help her put together a dollhouse kit. They did, but things got a little out of hand not long afterward. The friend liked the dollhouse so much, she gave it to her granddaughter and requested another for herself. Then, when she saw that one, she gave it to her daughter and requested a third.

Proud added plenty of hand-painted details to the houses, and said she even sent off to San Francisco for miniature gold-plated chandeliers. Soon, the couple was building them for fundraisers at the P.G. Heritage Society and Watsonville Hospital.

It became a business called Proud Partners, which grew from building 94 dollhouses into an art and antique business, with Proud painting furniture and then murals for businesses. That's when she realized she loved creating art.

"It was what I was meant to do all my life," she said, adding that although they Trust, he said, is required in any relationship, and "as law enforcement officers, we have a responsibility to develop positive relationships based on trust with the community." Carmel has specific needs and expects a high level of service, he noted. "Understanding that level and being able to provide are critical to relationship building in our village."

Respect is essential, too, in that officers must "respect the authority that has been given to us by our community." He quoted Sir Robert Peel — "The police are the people, and the people are the police," — and said he is responsible for keeping the community safe.

Finally, love: "As a police officer, you had better love the community you serve," he said. "If you haven't bought into what your community expects of you, then you will have a hard time being successful."

When he was hired, Tomasi said he already knew he appreciated the charm of Carmel, but he had to work here to determine whether he was a good fit. "I found out right away that I was a fit and have loved this community since," he said. "I caution people not to take the word, 'love,' as meaning 'soft' or 'weak,' though. I firmly believe in tough love. Tough love is caring enough about the community, the organization and the people to tell them the truth of a situation and to take action when needed."

"These three pillars provide a solid foundation for success at any level, whether it be personal, relationship, family or organization," Tomasi said. "These three pillars support positive relationships, which are formed as a result. If one of the three pillars is damaged, then so is the relationship."

Rerig asked the rest of the city staff and the public to welcome Tomasi "and provide him all of your trust and confidence."

A more formal ceremony will take place in council chambers at city hall Friday, Jan. 13, at 4 p.m., when Tomasi's parents will come from Michigan to celebrate with him, as will dignitaries and other local law enforcement chiefs.

Rerig encouraged Tomasi to "lead with wisdom and passion and heart."

And he wished good luck to Calhoun, who, he said, "stood on the shoulders of the giants that preceded him, led those who are following him, and set the bar for all those in public service."

Also at the ceremony Friday, detective Jeff Watkins was promoted to the rank of corporal. A 13-year veteran of Carmel P.D., Watkins has served as a field training officer and was also assigned to the Peninsula Regional Violence and Narcotics Team, handling some high-profile drug and homicide cases. With the promotion, Watkins is now working on patrol during the days, overseeing the shifts and training new recruits.

Cpl. Rachele Lightfoot, who formerly worked as the department's detective for several years, is taking on that role again.

STORMS

Facebook.

Another resident, Marcus Foster, told The Pine Cone that he's taking this weekend's storm seriously.

"The Big Sur River is dark brown, and it's the highest I've ever seen it," said Foster, who was living in Big Sur when storms in 1995 and 1998 wreaked havoc. "There's the potential for historic flooding and damage."

Nowhere is the threat of mudslides greater than along Palo Colorado Road, which in 1998 was rendered impassible for weeks after a big rain. The area lost 57 homes in the Soberanes Fire, and because so much erosion-controlling vegetation was burned in the blaze, mudslides are a serious concern for those who live there.

The Mid-Coast Fire Brigade is using a social media website, Next Door, to keep Palo Colorado area residents informed about the weather and the dangers it could create. "Be vigilant, be prepared, and be safe," fire chief Cheryl Goetz urged her neighbors.

Mehle, meanwhile, encouraged residents to prepare for this weekend's rain — although he suspects Big Sur locals won't need any prodding.

"Being prepared is something Big Sur residents do a great job of," he added. "They understand the weather and its impacts."

First priority goes to World War II veterans, and John served in the Navy during that war.

Proud choked up a little as she described the reception they got beginning at San Francisco Airport, where the flight was announced and other travelers applauded as the 25 veterans and the people who accompanied them came through the terminal. A band played 1940s-era music, and the USO served coffee and donuts.

The welcome in Washington was equally warm.

"It was three days of nonstop recognition," she said. "The veterans stood a little straighter."

Needless to say, Honor Flight has become yet another organization Proud supports.

She also works with the Lions Club's Blind and Visually Impaired Center in P.G., helping with their annual car show, motorcycle show and country store event. Then there's Hope, Horses and Kids in Carmel Valley, which provides equine therapy for autistic kids, veterans and others in need.

In her spare time, Proud meets with a group of women weekly to practice and improve her Italian language skills.

She has no plan to stop any time soon, either.

"There's still so much to do," she said.

codes to suit local circumstances, and the council accepted those, as well.

Finally, the council adopted changes to the code sections regulating licenses, fees and taxes for conducting business in the city.

Described as "housekeeping items," the changes include modifying how business license taxes are calculated for new businesses; basing administrative and application fees for business licenses, bingo games and filming on the costs of issuing those permits, not set amounts; and indicating that the community activities department, not the chief of police, is responsible for issuing film permits.

Those changes were approved without discussion.

Actors, actresses sought for summer roles at Forest Theater

STILL SEEKING actors and actresses of all ages to fill a few roles in two summer productions, the Forest Theater Guild will again offer auditions for parts in "Pirate Booty" and "Big," Saturday, Jan. 7, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Carmel Youth Center.

The Carmel-based theater group previously hosted auditions for "Pirate Booty" in November and "Big" in December.

Written and directed by Todd Weaver, "Pirate Booty" follows the adventures and antics of pirates and mermaids during a search for an elusive treasure. The play will be performed at Forest Theater in June.

A musical version of the 1988 Tom Hanks film, "Big" will open at the Forest Theater in late June and continue into July.

To schedule an audition, call (831) 626-1681. The youth center is located at Fourth and Torres.

Barbara Greenlee Gould

Barbara Greenlee Gould died peacefully on October 4th, 2016, approaching her 98th birthday.

Daughter of John Arthur Greenlee and Lulu (Corbin) Greenlee, Barbara was born in 1918 in Los Angeles, CA, where she grew up in the Hancock Park neighborhood. She excelled in sports, particularly tennis. She graduated from Occidental College in 1939 as an English major, and became a secretary at Lockheed. During World War II she met LeGrand "Lee" Gould, who was en route to the Pacific. They married six months later in 1945.

After living in the eastern U.S. for six years, Barbara and Lee moved to the San Francisco Peninsula in 1952. Barbara focused on raising their two sons, Stephen and Christopher, while Lee earned a graduate degree at Stanford and became a stockbroker. They spent weekends and vacations in Pebble Beach, later making it their regular summer home, and eventually their permanent retirement residence in 1979.

Barbara was an accomplished seamstress and cook, though her real passion was golf. For several decades she was a regular in ladies' groups and tournaments at Monterey Peninsula Country Club. She actively played into her late 80's.

Lee and Barbara were married 62 years until his passing in 2007. They will reunite at El Carmelo Cemetery in Pacific Grove. Barbara was a loving wife, mother, grandmother and great-grandmother. She leaves two married sons: Stephen (Karen) and Christopher (Kathryn); five grandchildren: Whitney Topping (Henry), Christopher K. Gould (Aly), Nathaniel Gould (Regina), Jonathan Gould (Margot) and Michael Mendelsohn; and five great grandchildren: H. J. "Quincy" Topping, Robert D. Topping, Christopher G. Topping, Eleanor Greenlee Gould, Luca LeGrand Gould and Emily H. Gould.

A private memorial service will be held in the Spring.

Phyllis Ann Drumm

1927 ❖ 2016

Phyllis Drumm, long-time resident of Carmel Valley, passed away on December 28, 2016 surrounded by her loving family.

Born and raised in Boone, Iowa, Phyllis traveled extensively and lived on both coasts. She ultimately decided the Valley was the place for her, and remained for 31 years.

Phyllis graduated from Stephens College in Missouri, then worked as a librarian. Throughout her life, she was active in various sports and social activities. However, Phyllis said that her greatest achievement was her family.

She was a devoted wife to Victor for nearly 66 years, until his passing in 2014. She and Vic raised three sons with kindness and patience and were ultimately blessed with three grandsons.

Phyllis was unwaveringly cheerful and optimistic, with a wonderful sense of humor. Her beautiful smile will be missed by all who loved her.

However, as we are engulfed in sorrow at her loss, Phyllis would have been quick to console us with a determined, "Well, onward and upward!"

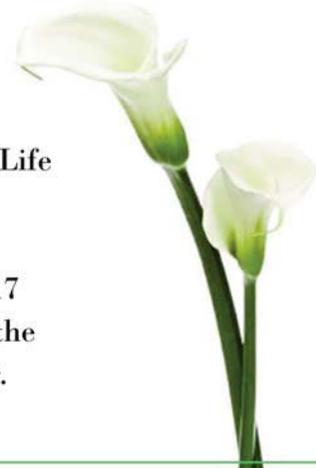

Phyllis is survived by sons Christopher Drumm (Amy Garrett) Polk City, Iowa and Dave Drumm (Rebecca) Marietta, Georgia; grandsons Neil, Ryan and Dylan. She was preceded in death by husband Vic, son Larry, brother Phil, and parents Nick and Mabel.

day decorations downtown this year and suggested Carmel have a window-decorating contest during the holidays, as well as a scarecrow contest in the fall, like Cambria does.

"I'm proposing that we hold back some of that money as prize money to encourage activities in October and December to decorate the town," she said.

But Richards said the chamber is already undertaking to do "all these other things we've asked them to do," and said, "everything is moving forward now, and I would hate to stop that momentum."

Hardy said that if the council didn't agree to withholding some of the money and organizing the decorating contests, she would bring it up during budget discussions later this year.

Reimers made the motion to disperse the funds, and it passed unanimously.

"It wasn't too surprising to have a council person suggest an activity or program, but it was very surprising that the council person would suggest withholding monies earmarked for that activity in order to force the chamber to do the project," chamber CEO Monta Potter commented after the meeting.

Potter said her board of directors and staff are very adept at coming up with programs and projects that "match our mission, are within the capacity of our small staff, and which are a good fit for Carmel."

'Grants' for winemaker fest, run

Also on Tuesday, the council approved a $4,000 "grant" to offset fees for the Run in the Name of Love set for June, and a $3,000 offset for the Winemakers' Celebration to be held in May, though Hardy questioned the wisdom of supporting the winetasting event.

"My concern is, what are they really doing to benefit the community, other than benefiting hospitality?" she asked.

Hardy inquired about issues regarding security and excessive drinking at last year's Winemakers' event, and Police Chief Paul Tomasi confirmed the department arrested four people — a 29-year-old who was so drunk he had to be taken to the hospital, a 28-year-old woman who was housed at Monterey P.D.'s jail until sober, a 39-year-old male whose intoxication was also a probation violation that landed him in county jail, and a 21-year-old man who was found to be drunk after he refused to leave a nearby business.

"We have since had a meeting with organizers to discuss the need to have a police officer on duty and more security, so that we don't have that happen again," he said, adding that the organizers will pay for the security and police time.

Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association CEO Kim Stemler defended the event, which she said "is not a moneymaker."

"I know you want it to be. I want it to be," she said. "This is really about community values. Do you want this to be a community event that's fun and vibrant? Last year, we did have some problems that we didn't have before. Most of you have been and found it to be an upscale event."

Budget questioned

Any revenues would benefit the organization's scholarships, but unforeseen expenses last year meant there wasn't any cash to share. More than 1,100 people attended, with 852 paying for tickets, which ranged from $65 to $125, but Stemler ended up having to pay for help after a large group of volunteers canceled at the last minute. She estimated revenues of $56,500 for this year's festival, with $45,000 from ticket sales, and $55,950 in expenses.

Hardy questioned the budget numbers and suggested kicking the request back, and Stemler seemed incredulous that she was quibbling over $3,000.

Ultimately, though, the council unanimously approved the grant, after Hardy asked that the organizers survey attendees to see how many of them stay in town.

The council also authorized, without discussion, the $4,000 grant for the Run in the Name of Love, which is organized by Susan Love and the Big Sur International Marathon.

Bowman said that the officers are mostly males, for reasons he doesn't fully understand. He said that in his current class of more than 60 people, only three are women.

While the service members can indicate a preference for where they're assigned, as is always the case in the military, everything depends on people's skills and abilities, and the needs of the armed forces worldwide.

For example, Bowman said that someone with a high score on the Defense Language Aptitude Battery — the tests that gauge someone's ability to learn another language — would likely be assigned to one of the more difficult languages, like Chinese or Arabic. That assignment would determine where in the world this person was headed.

Bowman said interpersonal skills are key to success in the field, because the jobs always entail dealing with people of other cultures. For example, just as here, you know not to bring up beach fires unless you want a fight, it's important to know that in Russia, you don't shake hands over the threshold of a doorway.

The job's not without its upside — Bowman remembered doing a jump with a Ukrainian parachute team and the ambassador to Ukraine, who also had military parachuting experience from Vietnam. He also accompanied the commanding general of the Ukrainian army on a visit to the United States, which included tours of military bases and cultural sites.

If you encounter any of these fine officers and their families during their time here, make them welcome. And maybe warn them about the beach fire thing, OK?

"CARMEL LEGENDS"

BY AL SMITH

If you didn't know it was there, you might easily pass by the GREAT WALL OF CARMEL. It's a Carmel stone monument, 2 1/2 feet wide and slightly higher than a man's head, that completely encloses an entire block. 4th and 5th Avenues are on north and south, Guadalupe on the east, Santa Rita on the west. All along the top of the wall are jagged stones set on edge, a distressingly sadistic touch. The wall dates from 1925, when a man named Smith (from Southern California) caused it to be built by two stone masons who spent 3 years on the project. He planned a major estate on the property, but went no further than a caretaker's cottage, elaborate walks, patios, pools, and a giant BBQ pit before his interests led him to a farm in the lower Carmel Valley and his block was sold. He headed back south, and today there are many small lots and private homes inside the enclosure. A few gateways have been broken through, and here and there a growing pine tree is winning the war of the wall. Start at Guadalupe and 4th where you'll find the main gate, a forbidding iron structure with the initial "S" set in small stones beside it, then walk around this interesting block ... you'll enjoy it. You might even hear the hoof beats of the horse who haunts the great wall!

A short list of people I'll miss as we head into the New Year

A YEAR ago, I wrote about not making resolutions that would surely vanish down a rabbit hole of unattainable goals. Instead of looking forward to a new year, I looked back at the old year to remember people I would miss that had passed on to glory. Though I didn't know them, their presence in the world brought me enjoyment or inspiration. The response to that column was heartening, as several readers told me about people they missed. And this year, I have even more to write about.

December was tragic, when a day apart Carrie Fisher and her mother, Debbie Reynolds, traveled to a galaxy far, far away. Carrie Fisher was noted for her role as Princess

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

Leia in "Star Wars." I admired her more for her writing than for her acting. After writing the screenplay version of her book "Postcards from the Edge," she became one of Hollywood's most sought-after script doctors.

At age 19, Debbie Reynolds learned to dance so well in only three months that she was able to match Gene Kelly and Donald O'Conner step for step in "Singing in the Rain" — still my all-time favorite movie musical.

In 2016, we lost three people who were so well known they were recognizable by a single name, Prince, Ali and Arnie. I was never part of the Prince phenomenon. Raising a family while earning a living took precedence over pop music. Yet I recognized his talent as a musician.

Muhammad Ali angered and irritated me through much of his career, and not just because he was a draft dodger, but his pure talent at his sport finally won me over, as it did much of the world. Simply put, he was the greatest.

Arnold Palmer impacted his sport more than any golfer. I saw him in person. Standing on a tee box he corkscrewed his backswing and uncoiled himself into a golf swing of such thunderous power you expected the ground around him to be scorched. The electricity emanating from him when he hitched up his pants and looked down the fairway could have lit up a metropolis. He was the king.

David Bowie created an alternative universe with some of his music. He populated it with the original "Major Tom," John Glenn, a hero who served his country in so many ways that he would get my vote for any Heroes Hall of Fame. In my mind, I see them irrevocably intertwined with Glenn being Major Tom "sitting in a tin can/far above the world/Planet Earth is blue/and there's nothing I can do." I'll miss them both.

I saw my first National Hockey League game at the old Detroit Olympia Stadium on Grand River Avenue. Gordie Howe generated the same intrinsic electricity that Arnold Palmer did. He was bigger, stronger, faster, meaner and more talented than anyone else on the ice. At age 51, he played in all 80 games for the Hartford Whalers in the World Hockey Association. The Gordie Howe hat trick — one goal, one assist and one fight in a game — exemplified how he combined power and finesse. Number 9 was simply the best at what he did.

If I had the talent to write the music and lyrics to just one song, it would be Leonard Cohen's "Hallelujah." There is no traditional religion in the lyrics of that song. Instead, they come from a place of great pain; from belief turned sour for anyone who has sat in a chair and glowered at God and asked, "How come you parted the Red Sea but didn't cure this one little person of cancer?" Cohen became part of the Hallelujah Chorus in 2016.

W.P. Kinsella wrote about baseball with the passion that Elizabeth Barrett Browning wrote about love. His book, "Shoeless Joe," became the movie "Field of Dreams." I can be channel surfing and come upon this film and watch it to the end no matter where it is in the story. "If you build it, they will come," and, "Go the distance," have taken their places among Hollywood's most memorable movie lines. Kinsella, a Canadian, ended his life under Canada's assisted dying legislation.

Earl Hamner created "The Waltons" television program from his book "Spencer's Mountain." It was family entertainment that didn't belittle any member of the family the way so many sit-coms of his era did. It was significant to me because it covered a time frame during the Great Depression and World War II that mirrored my own growing up years. Its signature sign off with the Walton family members saying "goodnight" to each other was repeated in millions of homes across the country.

J.M. Barrie said this about charm: "If you have it, you

Atticus Finch is one of my favorite fictional characters, both in books and movies. He was the creation of Harper Lee in "To Kill a Mockingbird." Her next novel wasn't well received. No matter. When you've written a masterpiece, who cares what anyone says?

Sadly, a couple of apples fell from my own family tree. I'll miss them both. Of course, I miss the many friends and family members who are gone — one in particular, whose death taught me that when you lose someone who is very close to you, you understand that love is forever. It is a hard way to learn an important lesson, but it's one that sooner or later comes to all of us.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:

Date: February 22, 2017
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept.: 13
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Agujaito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate

Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
