Concours d'Elegance prototype destroyed in fire

By MARY SCHLEY

A ONE-OF-A-KIND Ford prototype displayed at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance Sunday was destroyed along with its trailer in a vehicle fire just hours later. The owner of the $1 million car, Scott Grundfor of Arroyo Grande, purchased it from Ford Motor Co. in 2002 in perfect condition and was invited to enter it in the Concours' Wedge-Shaped Concept Cars & Prototypes featured class on the fairway Aug. 18.

According to Monterey Fire Chief Andrew Miller, crews were alerted to a trailer on fire on the Highway 1 Munras Avenue off-ramp at around 7 p.m., and by the time they arrived, the trailer was fully engulfed, with flames spreading to nearby vegetation.

Pacific Grove resident Anton Salameh, who drove by the scene shortly after the fire broke out, said "there was a plume of black and gray smoke hundreds of feet in the air coming from what looked like the forest alongside Highway 1, but then I saw a large semi with a vehicle trailer engulfed in flames on the off-ramp headed toward the mall. The flames were so large I was concerned the trees would catch fire."

Cab saved

Firefighters were able to contain the fire to the trailer and the rare automobile it was carrying.

"Crews prevented the fire from spreading to the tow vehicle and were able to detach the tow vehicle from the trailer," saving the truck from burning as well, according to

CRACKS HALT WORK ON BIG SUR'S LAST SLIDE

Timeline for full reopening uncertain

By CHRIS COUNTS

EVEN AS it was believed to be close to removing the last impediment to travel on Highway 1 between Carmel and Cambria, Caltrans had to halt work Aug. 16 at the Regent Slide in Big Sur "due to continuing slide activity in and around the repair site."

Previously, the state roads agency had anticipated the highway would be cleared by late fall. "Caltrans engineers are now assessing the slide area and gathering data to keep the public informed of the new timeline for reopening," the agency reported this week.

Earlier this month, a bulldozer crew noticed "surface cracking at several points around the area being excavated."

"Caltrans mapped this cracking and determined that this new slide would likely continue to move and impact the ongoing work to reopen the roadway," the report continued. "For the safety of work crews, Caltrans halted excavation work."

Last week, sensors were installed to monitor the movement of the slide area.

"Caltrans will collect data from these sensors over the next several weeks to determine the magnitude, rate, direction, depth and type of movement involved," the agency added. "Engineers will evaluate data to determine if additional stabilization work is needed. Excavation work will resume once Caltrans confirms it is safe to do so."

'Height and steepness'

Construction has been slowed by "the height and steepness of the slope."

One of two slides in Big Sur caused by storms in early February, the Regent Slide is located about 5 miles south of the Esalen Institute. The slide occurred when rocks and debris about 450 feet above Highway 1 "engulfed the roadway and continued down to the beach and ocean below," according to Caltrans.

Car Week marred by hundreds of tickets, dozens of collisions

■ Nearly 50 arrested

By MARY SCHLEY

CAR WEEK may generate major tax revenues and be a boon to local businesses and nonprofits, but this year's extravaganza also came with hundreds of citations, dozens of traffic collisions and loads of arrests, according to local law enforcement agencies.

Between Aug. 8 and Aug. 18 — the dates marking the eve of Car Week and its culmination with the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance — Carmel Police officers handled four crashes, wrote 103 tickets during 147 traffic stops, and had 15 misdemeanors and three felony arrests, including three people arrested for DUI, Sgt. Gerald Maldonado said Wednesday. The department fielded 663 calls for service — which could be anything from a blocked driveway or a noise complaint to a major problem — towed 13 vehicles and issued 316 parking citations.

Peeling out

Among the moving violations, Maldonado said, 14 were for disobeying signs or signals, 13 were for running stop signs, 13 were for exhaust/noise violations, and seven were for unsafe starts — essentially, peeling out.

At around 9 p.m. Aug. 15, an 83-year-old man was arrested for DUI after he drove around "road-closed" signs and vehicle barricades at Ocean and San Carlos.

"While doing so, he grazed an approximately $400,000 Lamborghini that was legally parked," Maldonado said, but he kept driving until he was stopped by police at

96-year-old served with eviction papers says she has nowhere to go

Jean Jacques says she's "no spring chicken" and has no idea what she'll do if she's evicted from her P.G. apartment.

By KELLY NIX

A PACIFIC Grove senior home last week demanded that a 96-year-old resident pay more than $100,000 in back rent within three days or face eviction from her apartment, where she's lived for more than two decades.

In an Aug. 16 "three-day notice to pay or quit" to Pacific Grove Senior Living resident Jean Jacques, the facility's executive director Jessica Sanchez said she owed $109,295.58 in "rent past due and other fees" that had accrued from January 2023 through this month.

"Pursuant to state law, you must either pay the total amount due within three days from the date of this notice or vacate the premises," says the notice sent to Jacques, who's lived in the apartment for 22 years.

If Jacques, who has some disabilities, fails to pay or vacate her apartment, the facility will "commence a legal proceeding to seek a judicial declaration of forfeiture and termination of the lease agreement," the notice says.

Jacques' friend and a fellow Pacific Grove Senior Living resident, Bob Sadler, said that in 2002, she paid nearly $250,000 to live in the Gibson Avenue apartment. She also had to make payments that, once the whole bill was added up, came to about $5,000 per month.

"Her $249,000 entry fee and monthly payments were made with the understanding that she would be able to live in the community and receive additional levels of care, if needed, until her death," Sadler told The Pine Cone.

Outlived her savings

However, Sadler said that when Jacques outlived her savings years ago and sought financial assistance, she was "allowed to stay" at the facility, formerly known as Forest Hill Manor, "without paying monthly fees."

"I'm not sure if the agreement to let her stay without money until her death was an implicit or explicit agreement," Sadler said, adding that a former manager of the senior home informed him they would testify in court, if need be, to the validity of Jacques' previous arrangement with Forest Hill.

Born to run

Pandi's people were not planning to get another greyhound. They'd already suffered the loss of Bachi, a beautiful, majestic fawn, to a heart tumor. But their behavior suggested otherwise. She, who religiously studied the Greyhound Adoption Facebook Group out of Santa Rosa, convinced her husband they could at least go look. We know what that means.

When they met Pandi, a female brindle, he said no, because he didn't like her coat. But she looked into the beseeching brown eyes of this 2-year-old retired racer from the Caliente track in Tijuana and said she had to have her.

Because she has the typical ear tattoos of a racer, Pandi's people were able to research her birthday, race history, and her six littermates, whose names all begin with the letter P - Pokémon and "Prissy Girl among them. Pandi's people decided to honor her heritage and keep her name.

"Unlike many retired racers who end up lame and battered, Pandi was in very good shape," her person said. "She was well socialized, confident and friendly. To this day, we can take her anywhere, and she's chill."

Yet they never let Pandi off leash. They've heard too many "escape stories" of these rescued coursers, capable of getting up to 45 mph in seconds.

"We bring Pandi to Carmel Beach all the time," the Monterey couple said. "But as soon as she hits the sand, she wants to do 'zoomies.' She was born to run, but her recall is not the best. We've thought about getting one of those 100-foot lunge lines like they have for horses, but we haven't yet."

Pandi's people thought they might bring her, now 9, back to Caliente to thank her handlers for taking good care of her. But Caliente, built in 1927, closed in July, creating the need for some 200 greyhound adoptions.

P.B. land auctioned over unpaid taxes

At the time of amount was just $3,200

sale, the overdue

By KELLY NIX

THE FORMER owner of a highly desirable property in Pebble Beach — who was apparently unaware that eight years of taxes had gone unpaid — is suing Monterey County after officials sold the land at a foreclosure auction in May because of a delinquent bill totaling a mere $3,200.

The strange lawsuit, filed in Monterey County Superior Court by landowner Napoli Investments S.A., claims that it had no idea it owed the taxes on the Spyglass Hill Road land and that the county was going to put it up for auction. The undeveloped parcel is 8,566 square feet, county records show, and sits right next to the 5th Green at Spyglass.

'Around May 29, 2024, the property was wrongfully sold at a foreclosure sale by Monterey County, unbeknownst to Napoli Investments," the Aug. 16 lawsuit says.

Napoli, which has a mailing address in Nassau, Bahamas, claims that the bills sent by Monterey County never made it to Cititrust, the property's trustee in the Cayman Islands, because the tax collector failed to use international postage.

"For that reason, Cititrust never received notice of the accruing unpaid taxes," the complaint says. Napoli "also alleges that the county was aware that Cititrust was not receiving annual tax notices and that at least a certain portion of these notices were returned to the county as undeliverable.'

Going, going, gone!

Once the taxes had accrued, the county began the process of selling the Pebble Beach land, but Napoli alleges that it "failed to give proper notice of the impending sale" in violation of several provisions of the California tax code.

In June 2022, after the county recorded a delinquent tax notice on the title, it published notice of its intent to sell the property. But Napoli alleges that Monterey County only published the listing for two consecutive weeks, when state tax laws require three weeks of publication.

In May, the county sold the land on Spyglass Hill Road — where homes have been purchased for many millions of dollars — at auction, and it went to the highest bidder for $275,100.

"At the time of the sale, the delinquent taxes only totaled approximately $3,200," the lawsuit says.

The owners learned about the sale earlier the same day when a trust beneficiary who happened to be visiting Napoli's adjacent property was informed about the foreclosure auction.

A Cititrust representative "immediately contacted the tax collector in an attempt to pay the delinquent taxes," but officials told him that "since the auction was complete, nothing could be done unless" the winning bidder didn't pay the county for the property. On June 11, though, the buyer paid for the land, and a deed transfer to the new owner was completed several days later.

"The property was wrongfully sold at a foreclosure sale by Monterey County," according to the suit, filed by Los Angeles attorney Cristyn Chadwick.

Napoli also claims Monterey County violated other tax law provisions, including incorrectly describing in the sales description an adjacent property that Napoli owned. It alleges "wrongful foreclosure" because the county "made insufficient efforts" to inform it that the land was to be sold. Napoli is asking a judge to find that the county violated provisions of the state tax code in the "wrongful foreclosure," rescind the sale and declare that Napoli is the property's "rightful true owner."

Verdicts, pleas and sentencings announced by Monterey County District Attorney Jeannine Pacioni

July 26 — A Monterey County Jury has found Paulo Cesar Alcaraz Ortiz, 27, of Greenfield, guilty of murder in the first degree for intentionally running over Guadalupe Garcia. Judge Andrew Liu will sentence the defendant on Sept. 4. The defendant is facing 25 years to life in prison.

On Nov. 16, 2021, the defendant was in a car stolen from a friend's parent. A police officer tried to contact the defendant, but he refused to obey the officer's orders and began a high-speed flight from arrest. On several occasions he attempted to strike pedestrians with his car and missed. At one point he rammed a police car to avoid capture. Finally, he targeted Garcia with an intent to kill him. He missed in his first try but followed the fleeing victim through a field and drove over him, killing him. Police vehicles, including that of Soledad Police Chief Damon Wasson, then rammed the defendant and dragged him out of his car.

The defendant told the police that he believed killing the victim would either cause the police to stop chasing him or cause them to kill him.

This case was investigated by the Greenfield and Soledad Police Departments.

Aug. 13 — DGDG Automotive LLC, a large San Francisco Bay area car dealer with more than 16 locations in Northern California, including Salinas Honda, will pay $290,000 to settle an environmental and consumer protection case.

The civil complaint, filed in the Santa Clara County Superior Court, alleged that DGDG, also known as Del Grande Dealer Group, unlawfully managed and disposed of hazardous waste, such as brake parts cleaner, automotive fluids, and parts containing circuit boards.

The settlement also resolves allegations that the company failed to redact or shred paperwork containing personal customer information before throwing it away in the trash.

On July 23, 2024, a judge ordered DGDG to pay $215,000 in civil penalties, $50,000 in investigative costs, and $25,000 to fund training of California regulators to resolve these violations.

Cops track down thief of costly e-bike

By MARY SCHLEY

A SAN Jose man suspected of renting a $4,000 e-bike from a downtown Carmel shop Aug. 9 and never returning it was arrested Monday after a police officer figured out his identity and tracked him down.

According to Carmel Police Sgt. Gerald Maldonado, Valdemar DaRocha — a 24-year-old man who's on parole for burglary — walked into Mad Dogs & Englishmen at Ocean and Mission two weeks ago and rented a Super73 electric bike that can be ridden on or off-road and has a range of 55 miles.

When he didn't return the bike at the end of the day, the shop owners notified police and posted surveillance photos on social media asking for help identifying the thief and offering a $1,000 reward.

The shop, which specializes in high-end bikes and gear, has seen similar thefts in the past, so the proprietors knew to also keep an eye out for the bike on online resale sites.

"The business found the missing bike for sale on Facebook Marketplace," Maldonado said. The seller was someone calling himself Gabriel DaRocha.

"Officer Greg Johnson investigated the case and conducted several records and database checks under that name," he said. He eventually uncovered a link between that name and the man whose true identity is Valdemar DaRocha. "Johnson obtained a photograph of DaRocha from the DMV database and compared it to video surveillance footage from the business," Maldonado continued. "It was a match."

'A ruse'

Further digging into his records revealed DaRocha is on parole and Johnson set up a sting.

"His parole agent was contacted, and under a ruse, DaRocha was told his PO needed to meet with him," Maldonado said.

DaRocha was arrested at the parole office on Coleman Avenue in San Jose at 10:30 a.m. Aug. 19 and transported to Carmel, where he was taken into custody and then booked into Monterey County Jail on charges of second-degree burglary, grand theft and possession of stolen property, all felonies, CPD records indicate. He has since bailed out.

The bike was recovered and returned to the shop, according to Maldonado.

A surveillance camera captured this image of Valdemar DaRocha as he arranged to rent the e-bike he subsequently stole and tried to sell online, according to police.

Most candidate forms included signatures of non-voters

By MARY SCHLEY

AFTER IT was reported in The Pine Cone last week that Carmel City Council candidate Parker Logan qualified for the ballot with the bare minimum of 20 valid signatures out of the 30 on his nomination papers, he asked city clerk Nova Romero for the tallies of his opponents. If a candidate requests public information during election season, the results are automatically sent to all contenders and are also available to the public.

When validating a resident's bid to secure a spot on the ballot, Monterey County Elections officials stop checking signatures — which must belong to registered voters in the city — after reaching the minimum 20 required out of the maximum of 30 submitted.

Reasons why

According to the documents provided under the California Public Records Act, no other candidates for office came as close to not qualifying as Logan. Of the 10 signatures on his nomination papers rejected by the elections department, six belong to people who are not registered to vote in Carmel-by-the-Sea, one signer is registered in another district, two have different addresses on file at the registrar's office, and one listed an incomplete address.

Former Eastwood home on market

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CARMEL residence where Clint Eastwood lived while he was mayor is being offered for sale by its owner, Fred O'Such, for $21 million. Eastwood called Las Ondas Estate at the corner of San Antonio and Ninth home from 1981 to 1996, when O'Such and his late wife, Joanne, purchased it. Realtor Tim Allen has the listing

The three-story Spanish Revival residence was constructed in 1924, and O'Such hired architect Eric Miller to design a full rebuild in the Arts and Crafts style with Carmel stone and clay tile roofs. The work was completed in fall 1998, according to the city's property files.

Large lot with gate

The four-bedroom, four-and-a-halfbathroom house has a two-car garage and is located on an unusually large and gated 11,000-square-foot lot.

According to Allen's office, its features include vaulted ceilings with exposed mahogany beams, cherrywood floors, plastered walls and mahogany doors and window trim, baseboards, moldings, staircases and custom built-ins.

The formal dining room and living room contain gas fireplaces, and the kitchen is equipped with built-in seating, high-end appliances, wood and tile countertops, tin tile ceiling details and a pantry.

Other amenities include a media room, a temperature-controlled wine cellar and two laundry rooms, one in the primary suite. Its multiple indoor-outdoor spaces feature decks with ocean views on the main and upper levels and a manicured interior courtyard. A generator was added in 2011.

According to the Monterey County Assessor's Office, its assessed value as of Jan. 1 is $3,586,241.

In a statement, O'Such said, "My family has loved living and entertaining at this iconic property for nearly three decades. Right after we purchased the home, we rebuilt the interior spaces, adding in an Arts and Crafts style by installing mahogany wood finishes, cherrywood floors and other elements that were interesting to me. It is time for the next owner to enjoy this historic home and share it with their friends and family for years to come."

"Our anticipated completion of construction is June 2027, with the building ready for use by students and faculty in fall 2027," CSUMB spokesman Walter Ryce told The Pine Cone Tuesday. "The funding for the building is a mix of philanthropic, federal funding, campus reserves and a loan from" the California State University system, "including a generous donation from Bruce Taylor of Taylor Farms."

The building, named after Ted Taylor, the father of Taylor Farms chairman and CEO Bruce Taylor, will be built near the Chapman Science Academic Center Building and Science Research Lab Annex, which is on 5th Avenue.

P.G. sets council candidate forum

By KELLY NIX

DURING A public forum next month, Pacific Grove residents will have a chance to pose questions to the candidates vying for seats on the city council.

On Sept. 17 at 6 p.m., the Pacific Grove Candidate Forum at the city's community center will be moderated by the League of Women Voters of Monterey County. In previous such forums conducted by the group, citizens wrote down questions for the mayor and city council candidates, and a representative offered a chance for the candidates to respond.

Civic issues

Pacific Grove Mayor Bill Peake decided not to run for reelection, and those hoping to take his place are former P.G. City Councilman Dan Miller, councilman Nick Smith and Dionne Ybarra.

Those seeking a council member seat are councilman Luke Coletti, former Mayor Carmelita Garcia, Chilla Kartalov, incumbent Chaps Poduri, Tina Rau and Paul Walkingstick.

Meanwhile, the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce last week sent a half-dozen questions to the candidates, the answers of which the group will publish in an election preview.

Several of the questions pertain to city issues that have already been resolved, such as a hotel at the site of the American Tin Cannery, approved January 2022, and a roundabout at the intersection of Sunset, Cedar and Congress, which was OK'd in July.

The chamber also asked the candidates their positions on outdoor dining, if they back several city-supported events, including Good Old Days, and how they feel about decreasing the size of the city council from seven members to five (four council members and the mayor), which residents will be asked to vote on Nov. 5, election day.

SACRAMENTO LOOKING TO PASS CRIME REFORM BILL UNDER THE GUN

By CAITLIN CONRAD

 ${f R}_{{f e}{f p}{f u}{f b}{f l}{f c}{f a}{f b}{f c}{f a}{f b}{f a}{f b}{f a}{f b}{f a}{f b}{f a}{f b}{f a}{f a}{f b}{f a}{f a}{f a}{f b}{f a}{f a}{h a}{$ Sacramento hosted a press conference Thursday to bring attention to a bill that would overturn the sentences of some of California's most deadly offenders. Senate Bill 94, which was voted down in 2023, was revived on the legislative calendar this week with just days to go before the end of the session.

The bill would make it possible for a person on death row or serving a life sentence without the possibility of parole to petition for resentencing if the crime occurred before 1990. The convicted person must also have served at least 25 years in custody.

Republican Assembly Member James Gallagher said the bill poses a threat to public safety in a state that should be concerned with rising crime.

"SB 94 is a dangerous bill that would overturn the sentences of some of the most heinous killers in our criminal justice system," said Gallagher, whose district includes Butte and Placer counties.

Including murder

The bill's author, Dave Cortese, a Democrat from the San Francisco Bay area, describes it as a "second look" for Californians sentenced to death or serving life. A Democratic supermajority failed to pass the bill in 2023, and Republicans say bringing it back this late in the session is not the right approach for such an important crime bill.

'They are purposefully bringing this up to shove down the throats of Californians, said Senate minority leader Brian Jones, a Republican from San Diego.

Under the bill, some criminals would not be eligible for resentencing, including individuals convicted of first-degree murder of a peace officer.

If passed, eligible prisoners would be allowed to petition the courts to reduce their sentences, and judges would be allowed to apply any changes in laws since conviction.

Under SB 94, judges would even be allowed to vacate a conviction or impose judgment on a lesser offense. Additionally, the bill would require a court to give "great weight" to evidence offered by the petitioner to prove there was a mitigating circumstance in their case.

'Evolving decency'

California has made numerous changes to criminal statutes since 1990. Democrats argue judges should have the opportunity to take a second look at these sentences in light of what the bill calls "evolving standards of decency." Some of the reforms mandate the consideration of mitigating factors at sentencing such as age, childhood trauma, victimization, race and military service. SB 94 would give courts a chance to apply these reforms to those sentenced to spend the rest of their lives in prison.

Over the last decade, California has also enacted reforms recognizing people are capable of redemption and requiring judges to consider an individual's rehabilitation while in custody when evaluating past sentences.

Victims and their families would be notified before any eligible prisoners come up for resentencing. Under Prop 9, the Victims Bill of Rights Act, any victim of a crime must be given notice of all public proceedings, including all parole or other post-conviction release proceedings.

I listen to you, I negotiate for you. I meet your needs.

Before condors, group brought back bald eagles | MONTEREY COUNTY FAIR

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE IT'S been overshadowed by the group's successful and well-publicized effort to reintroduce California condors to the region, the Ventana Wildlife Society got its start doing the same for the bald eagle.

Earlier this month, the VWS shared footage captured in June at San Simeon of "eaglets passing time in their nest as they await Mom's arrival with their next meal."

"Each member of this family is a likely descendant of the 70 bald eagles we released more than 24 years ago," the group said.

Between 1986 and 2000, the VWS released 70 juvenile bald eagles at a remote site in Big Sur. The effort proved successful, and the local population of the majestic bird is thriving.

'Our goal was establishing a self-sustaining population in Central California that would consist of at least four breeding pairs," the group's website indicates.

Off the list

By the 1960s, there were than 450 breeding pairs of bald eagles left in the continental United States due to impacts of the pesticide DDT, which causes eggshell thinning. Yet by the early 2000s, when they were taken off the endangered species list — thanks to VWS and many others — there were 15,000 breeding pairs in the lower 48 states. The federal government removed the bald eagle from its list of endangered species in 2007, while the group reports that there are "dozens" of nesting territories in the region today.

"We suspect we have around 30 active pairs — meaning they laid eggs and are attempting to raise chicks from San Francisco to Santa Barbara," executive director Kelly Sorenson said.

Two busted for serving alcohol after hours

By MARY SCHLEY

LATE-NIGHT Car Week parties at a downtown restaurant led police to arrest Christian Pepe, son of restaurateur Rich Pepe, early Saturday morning.

According to Carmel Police Sgt. Gerald Maldonado, officers Tim Ament and Joe Boucher were on patrol shortly after 4 a.m. Aug. 16 when they heard loud music coming from the rooftop bar at Vesuvio restaurant on Sixth Avenue near Devendorf Park.

"Once on scene, they noted alcohol was being consumed onsite after serving hours," he said. California state law prohibits businesses from selling or serving alcohol between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m. The restaurant, where the younger Pepe is the bartender, closes at 10 p.m. on weeknights and 11 p.m. on weekends.

Police also noted that Pepe, 35, was under the influence. Because he's on probation for a February 2023 DUI conviction, Pepe is not allowed to consume alcohol.

They didn't arrest him then, but Carmel P.D. forwarded information about the after-hours violation to the California Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, according to Maldonado.

About 24 hours later, at 4 a.m. Saturday, the same officers responded to Vesuvio "for loud music coming from the rooftop bar once again," Maldonado said, and again they "observed subjects inside consuming alcohol after serving hours."

This time, they arrested Pepe and booked him into Monterey County Jail for violating his probation, but he made bail not much later and was released. New charges have yet to be filed against him by the Monterey County District Attorney's Office, according to court records.

Two weeks earlier, police officers working the graveyard shift cited Dexter Salazar, owner of Edwin's restaurant at San Carlos and Sixth, for the same violation.

Salazar, who was caught Aug. 3 serving alcohol to customers in his restaurant at 2:15 a.m. in violation of state law and his use permit — which states the downtown spot must be closed by 11 p.m. - was cited and released for the violation, according to Maldonado. "He was previously provided with a verbal warning for the same violation," he said, adding that the case was forwarded to ABC, the district attorney's office and city code enforcement.

Charges have yet to be filed against Salazar, either, and the liquor licenses for both restaurants remain active.

TAMC struggles to keep traffic flowing along Highway 68

August 23, 2024

By CHRIS COUNTS

FRUSTRATED BY their slow morning commutes along Highway 68, increasing numbers of westbound motorists have sought out shortcuts, including driving through a residential neighborhood near the Toro Place Cafe that parallels the busy road between Salinas and the Monterey Peninsula.

But the practice created so much traffic that a resident's group complained to the Transportation Agency for Monterey County, which did a survey and discovered that more than 500 cars a day were getting off at Portola Drive and driving about a mile through the neighborhood and past a school before turning back onto Highway 68. "We didn't realize it was this bad," TAMC official Doug Bilse told The Pine Cone.

Expensive tickets issued

To address the risks of bringing so much traffic into a residential neighborhood, TAMC closed a loophole in an alternate commute on a trial basis through September. The agency put up a barricade at the intersection of Torero Drive and Bravo Court, along with lots of warning signs. Despite the effort, some commuters resisted the road closure and tried to get around it.

"Eight tickets were given out the first day," Bilse reported. "It's a bad ticket you get three citations: one for driving the wrong way, one for driving on the wrong side of the road, and one for aggressive driving."

According to Bilse, the closure of Torero Road seemed to have solved the safety issues in the neighborhood. But over time, some residents in the neighborhood complained the closure of the road was making their commutes longer, and worse, when school recently started up again, commuters inundated another neighborhood to the east in search of a quicker route to work. "The extra traffic threw a wrench in it," Bilse said of the solution.

Bilse said the topic will likely "come to a head" Oct. 8 when there will be a community meeting. Meanwhile, the agency is doing everything it can to find a solution. "We're scrambling to make it better,' he said.

The official suggested the long-term solution to the problem is building roundabouts along Highway 68. A plan to install as many as nine roundabouts, which could cost as much as $200 million, is slowly working its way through the planning process. Meanwhile, some residents have spoken out against the plan, contending it is too expensive or won't solve the gridlock.

The project's environmental impact report is anticipated to be certified by October 2024. Some land still needs to be acquired to make the project possible, and that's expected to be done by May 2027. The design of the work should be ready by June 2027, with construction starting in February 2028. The project is expected to be completed — assuming no delays — by November 2030.

Petition launched

In response to preventing motorists from exiting the neighborhood via Torero Drive, some have started a petition at change.org. So far, 48 people have signed it. To find it, type "Torero" into the change. org website.

"Everyone wants to solve the morning cut-through traffic, but closing Torero is unfair to many residents of the Toro Park community," the petition reads.

With the previous clearing of two slides - including pesky Paul's Slide, which had blocked Highway 1 for more than a year the Regent Slide remains the last one preventing unimpeded travel along the coast in Monterey County.

Despite the construction and some minor delays for motorists, all Big Sur resorts and shops are open north of Esalen and south of Lucia. A 6.8-mile section of the highway between Esalen and the county line remains closed.

Stopping falling rocks

Also in Big Sur, a $7.5 million "rock slope protection project" is underway along Highway 1 near Fernwood Resort. There will be minor delays for motorists through October, with one-way traffic control. The contractor is Graniterock Construction.

"During previous winter storms, several concrete blocks which previously armored the highway were loosened by rains and high-water flows in the Big Sur River," Caltrans announced. "Crews will armor the bank of the river with 4- to 6-ton rocks, which will make the slope capable of withstanding the erosive forces of the Big Sur River and protect the integrity of the roadway above."

m A}$  SAN Bernardino County cyclist ignored warnings and road-closure signs, tried to climb over a rockslide on Highway 1, fell and was injured, and then had to be rescued last Friday, according to the California Highway Patrol. Cody Mortensen, 28, faces several misdemeanor charges for attempting the crossing.

The morning of Aug. 9, a worker for Papitch Construction, the contractor tasked with clearing the Regent Slide on Highway 1 just south of the Big Creek Bridge, alerted California State Parks rangers that at around 9:30, Mortensen - who was later identified by his California ID card rode his bike to the road-closed barricades on Highway 1 2 miles south of the point where motorists are directed to turn around and asked for some water, according to the highway patrol.

"He gave Mortensen a bottle of water and advised him that the road was closed due to a rockslide," CHP officer Saul Perez said, adding that the worker told Mortensen the road was not passable, "and if he attempted to cross, he will probably die."

"The crew member also told him that if he gets caught by CHP in the closure, he would be cited," Perez said. "Mortensen said he was going to try anyway."

About an hour later, a California State Parks ranger drove to the slide and spotted "a backpack and a bloody arm," approximately 100 feet below, according to Perez.

Rescued and treated

The ranger requested the Monterey County Sheriff's Office Search and Rescue Team, though Mortensen had managed to climb down to the beach, where he was rescued by the ranger and Big Sur Fire personnel.

"After Mortensen was rescued, he was treated by AMR for a laceration to his forearm and possible head trauma," Perez "Mortensen was said. life-flighted to Natividad Medical Center for his injuries."

The Lucerne Valley resident "is being charged for the wanton disregard of failing to obey a person directing traffic and failing to obey the traffic signs and signals," and could face double fines for the misdemeanor offenses.

"He also endangered the lives of rescue personnel who had to traverse an active slide," Perez said. "Road closures are put in place for the safety of the public as well as for the crews working within the closure. It is against the law to drive, ride or walk past a 'road closed' sign."

A case has yet to be filed against Mortensen, according to Monterey County Superior Court records.

Rancho Cielo students showed fully restored MG at The Quail, Pebble Beach

By MARY SCHLEY

WITH ROBUST financial help and a lot of enthusiasm, students in nonprofit Rancho Cielo's auto restoration program transformed a dusty, rusty, forlorn 1952 MG TD into a shiny red marvel that showed on the grass at The Quail — A Motorsports Gathering and at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance during Car Week.

The achievement was a major milestone for the kids in the program, now in its third year, and the restoration took around four months to complete, according to Joseph DeRuosi, a senior director at Rancho Cielo, which former Monterey County Superior Court Judge John Phillips founded in Salinas in 2000 to help at-risk youth learn the vocational skills they need to embark on solid career paths and stay out of the criminal justice system.

The drive behind creating the auto-restoration program was twofold: Ignite a spark in kids who will take that newly acquired passion and learning and transform it into a job that pays them well enough to live in Monterey County, and ensure the vintage cars like those seen throughout the Peninsula during Car Week continue to run.

"These are students who haven't had a lot of success in an academic setting — and some have been in jail," DeRuosi said. They're unlikely to be attracted by English or math classes, but give them a pile of parts and help them make a car out of it, and they rise to the challenge.

"We're not going to train you to do lube and oil filters," he said. "We're going to train you to restore high-end vehicles, so you can make a living wage."

Rancho Cielo had its largest graduating class overall this year, with 73 students, according to DeRuosi, and the courses focusing on auto restoration and diesel engines — which are important in the agricultural industry — saw 16 students receive their certificates, also a record.

"Those 16 graduates have all gone on to start at MPC or Hartnell or went right into the industry," he said. Several received college scholarships.

Carmel-by-the-Sea Rotary Club member Mark Grandcolas, who helped establish the program, observed that while the expense of incarcerating a teenager is $165,000 per year, putting them through Rancho Cielo costs far less — just $29,000 annually.

"In two years, they complete their high school diploma and vocational training, they then get a job and become a taxpayer," he said, adding that such systems and programs should be implemented throughout the country.

Helping hands

The auto-restoration course benefits from the hands-on approaches of Phillips, his staff and Grandcolas — and generous contributions from the P.B. Concours d'Elegance and Rotary, among others, as well as federal and state taxpayer-funded grants. Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance chairman Sandra Button and her husband, Martin, along with other major donors, last year started a fundraising drive for scholarships in honor of the late Don Williams, a key figure at the Concours for a half-century.

"The program has grown better than we expected," Grandcolas said. "When we first started it a couple of years ago, we didn't know if the kids would cotton to this. These are old cars, and these kids are barely exposed to cars at all, much less old ones."

And he's gratified by the diversity of the students who are interested in learning the art of classic-car restoration and want to do it for a living.

"In Monterey County, we are especially happy to see this grow, because there are very few venues in the United States where kids can learn to work on and restore these classic cars," he said. "Monterey County is watching as all these shops close down and disappear, and this is how we can replenish them. Not only do these kids love these cars and working on them, the local shops want to help teach these kids."

Professionals are sharing tools, parts and knowledge. The MG the class restored was given to the ranch by Wiz and Bruce Lindsey, and pros from local shops guided students on everything from shaping fenders and finishing doors to rebuilding the motor. Students were paid for their hundreds of hours of labor, and when the car is sold, the proceeds will go back into the program.

Students are also allowed to bring their own vehicles in and work on them, according to DeRuosi. Transportation is one of the biggest barriers to getting a job, so encouraging them to get their own cars running serves the dual purpose of helping them learn and helping them get around.

Finding passion

The course got a boost when it was featured on the cover of Rotary's magazine, which is distributed to more than a million members, according to Grandcolas.

"That has generated a lot of nice calls from people who want to donate to the ranch or offer scholarships for fouryear programs, and from other clubs that have said they want to duplicate the program for kids" throughout the country, he said.

In addition to providing the initial funding, the Carmel-by-the-Sea Rotary Club recently bought a 1929 Ford Model A Roadster to donate to the ranch. "They're going to restore it and auction it off," Grandcolas said, and Phillips, who brought in his own truck for the kids to work on a couple of years ago, recently secured a Jaguar for a future class to restore.

The students' success has also inspired Phillips to expand the course.

"Now the judge wants to build a new building on the campus dedicated to this program," he said. "He wants to Tawny helped write many a Pine Cone article from her perch on the arm of the couch, making sure to alert me when I had been staring at the screen too long. She filled our home with love. Through good times and bad, we made each other braver and better. put a lot more students through it."

It could even generate a satellite effort at Laguna Seca. "Everywhere I go, people recognize the need for this and ask how can they help," he continued. "The whole community — for me, it's beautiful to see they want it to flourish."

Students who restored the MG — some of whom had never been out of Salinas before, according to DeRuosi accompanied it during its Car Week appearances.

"They have never had the opportunity to see what a car show like this looks like," let alone the lifestyles and career opportunities they present, he said.

Grandcolas said he's thrilled by the progress and growing confidence he's seen in the students who have gone through the program.

"In transforming these old vehicles, they transform themselves," he said. "They'll never go back. They're different people, now."

He mentioned a student in the inaugural class who excelled at paint and body work.

"He got really good really fast, and before the class was done, only the fourth week, his friends were coming to him at his parents' house and asking him to do repairs for them," he said. "He was making money before he even finished the class."

17A

And that's why part of the curriculum will in the future focus on basic personal and business finance, according to Grandcolas.

"They can become their own boss," he said. "These older cars give them a chance that these new cars can't."

And those "older cars" don't necessarily have to be the ones seen at the high-end shows during Car Week.

"It's really important to us that the kids follow their passion. If they want to restore cars to compete somewhere like Pebble Beach, we'll teach them that," Grandcolas said. "But not all of them want to do that. Some of them want to take what they learn and work on hot rods or low riders, and I've been working on curriculum for that."

ETHYL ETSUKO RADOWICZ February 10, 1941 to July 4, 2024

E thyl Radowicz, beloved mother, grandmother, sister, aunt and friend, passed away on July 4th at the age of 83. Even after losing her husband, Richard, in March of 2023 she continued with a positive attitude and was thankful for the wonderful life she lived and appreciated her many friends.

Ethyl was born on February 10, 1941 in Hilo, Hawaii to Shigeru and Yoshiko Hara. She grew up on a farm among her three sisters and four brothers. She often recalled fond memories of climbing trees, riding down cane chutes, and singing native Hawaiian songs. Following her graduation from Hilo High she left the Big Island for the mainland to continue her schooling at the University of Oregon, where she majored in education. Ethyl taught briefly in Redondo Beach and then in the Bay Area where she met Richard Radowicz. Ethyl and Richard married in 1965 and enjoyed 58 years together.

Ethyl and Richard moved to Carmel Valley in 1967 to raise their two children, Tanya and Steven, and quickly became involved in their new community and worship at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church. Ethyl helped Richard grow his fledgling company Apquip. As her children grew older, Ethyl began working as a substitute teacher for the Carmel School district and then taught fourth grade at the old Del Monte School for several years.

Ethyl then landed a coveted job at Tularcitos Elementary School and spent 25+ years there teaching fourth grade and then first grade. She remembered fondly all those students who had been in her classes, and took great pride in seeing former students become successful young adults. Many of those former students later came back to praise the positive impact Mrs. Radowicz had on their lives. Through teaching she also became lifelong friends with many of her colleagues. Ethyl's friend groups grew to include dinner parties, volunteering at community events, mah-jong groups, international travel trips, book clubs and lots of laughs and fun.

She loved tennis and could be found at CVAC several times a week playing with one of her groups of equally dedicated tennis friends, many of whom she had played with for several decades. She competed in local club tournaments for many years, and in retirement delighted in taking trips to watch the U.S. Open, Australian Open and French Open. Ethyl played tennis almost to the end, playing her last games 14 days before her passing.

Ethyl enjoyed hosting and cooking meals for family and friends, all of whom raved about her culinary talents. Her attitude was food equals love, welcoming guests with true Hawaiian spirit. She enjoyed preparing dishes from many different regions of the world. If friends dropped by or stayed for an extra meal, Ethyl could whip up an amazing multi course feast with ease. Her son's friends would often conveniently drop by just in time for dinner or dessert, and she loved it. She shared her talent for cooking with many, including spending hours in the kitchen teaching her grandchildren the art of pie making, with dough from scratch of course! The Carmel Pine Cone

Miller. Firefighters — a total of 17 responded — also used hand tools to stop the fire from creeping into the trees off the side of the road and managed to get every-thing under control in 15 minutes.

Miller said the car was valued at approximately $1 million and estimated the total loss at around $1,028,300. A fire-fighter sustained a minor injury during the overhaul work that followed, but no one else was hurt.

"Based on the preliminary investigation the night of the transport trailer/vehicle fire, the cause was undetermined," Miller told The Pine Cone Tuesday. "This will be a difficult fire to find origin and cause, due to the extent of damage."

He also noted that, as the law enforcement agency that has jurisdiction, the California Highway Patrol is in charge of any investigation.

A rare Italian-bodied Ford, the Probe I was built in Dearborn, Mich., by Ford design chief Don Kopka in collaboration with Carrozzeria Ghia in Turin, Italy, "and became the star of the 1979 Frankfurt Auto Show," according to the Concours. "The thoroughly aerodynamic silhouette was the result of wind-tunnel testing and achieved a drag coefficient 37 percent lower than a typical contemporary two-door coupe."

While the car, which was a striking red and had a distinctive glass cabin and rear-wheel "spats," never made it past the concept phase, it heavily influenced Ford's production cars that followed.

Heartbroken

Shortly after the fire, Scott Grundfor Company posted about the accident on social media.

"It is with utter sadness and a heavy heart that we have lost our 1979 Ford Ghia Probe I Prototype in an accident on the highway late in the day on Sunday after showing the car at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance," Drew Grundfor wrote. "We are a family-oriented company, and it feels like we have lost a member of our family today."

August 23, 2024

The fire started while the driver, Jackson Fajnor, was at speed on the highway, and Grundfor thanked him for his quick thinking in getting on the off-ramp to help ensure it wasn't more catastrophic.

He also acknowledged the firefighters and law enforcement officers who got the blaze under control and protected others during the process.

"We are forever lucky to be a part of this car's history, however tragic this event was, and we will bring what remains of the car home to Arroyo Grande so the car can remain next to the Ghia/Ford bodied prototypes in our collection," Grundfor wrote.

This one-off Italian-bodied Ford prototype had its P.B. Concours d'Elegance debut hours before it burned.

Ford President and CEO Jim Farley, a frequent and longtime Car Week participant, commented, "Our hearts are heavy, too," and Grundfor responded that he was glad Farley was able to see the car again this week before it was tragically destroyed.

"We will be bringing her back tomorrow to assess," he continued. "At the very least, she will be a sculpture in our showroom as a reminder that all is temporary and that we should be grateful for all we have, including Probe V, Probe IV and all the others in the collection."

It's not outside the realm of possibility that the Grundfor crew could restore the Probe I, though.

"It may be a long-term project for us," Fajnor commented online. "It will be a while before we do anything with it, but it's a car that is worth the effort someday."

Jacqueline Ruth Lynch.

Jacqueline Ruth Lynch, beloved mother, grandmother, sister and friend to many, passed away August 13, 2024, in Carmel Valley, CA at the age of 81. Born in Utah, Jackie lived a full and vibrant life starting from a childhood spent in Arizona with her grandparents, Mom, and two brothers. Jackie traveled the world with her grandparents and attended Marymount High School in Los Angeles, CA where she met her husband of 46 years, Michael Lynch. Jackie then attended the University of Arizona, graduating with a bachelor's degree in criminal justice. After they were married and their son Michael was born, Jackie and Michael moved to Jackson Hole, Wyoming where their daughter Michelle was born. They eventually started three businesses and enjoyed everything the West had to offer.

Ethyl had a zest for life that endeared her to many. She was fun loving and adventurous, and was fortunate to have visited many countries along with most of the United States, making many new friends during her travels. She and Richard visited Japan, New Zealand, Australia, Tasmania, France, Germany, Norway, Italy, Austria, Thailand and Iceland, plus many trips to "home home" in Hawaii. She also traveled with her friends Patty, Sandy, Bridget and Ann to China, Croatia, Peru and South Africa.

Ethyl was preceded in death by her husband, Richard, who passed in March of 2023. She is survived by her daughter, Tanya Radowicz Boillot (Dominique); granddaughter, Mia Boillot; son, Steve Radowicz (Melissa); grandchildren, Savanna and Justin Radowicz; her sister, Sylvia Donovan and brother, Kenneth Saito, as well as many nieces and nephews.

A special thank you to VNA Hospice care and Charito and the staff at Villa Mirage for all their compassionate care.

A celebration of life will be held at Gardener Ranch in Carmel Valley from 1 to 4 p.m. on September 22nd.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that donations be made to either Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula, or Yellow Brick Road

In 1984, the family moved to the Monterey Peninsula, where they became active community members and owned several businesses. Over the last 40 years Jackie significantly supported the business, philanthropic, arts, education and religious communities on the Monterey Peninsula in addition to mentoring many individuals both professionally and personally. Jackie's enthusiastic energy and passion for friendship and family will be greatly missed by many.

Jackie is survived by son, Michael Lynch; daughter, Michelle Strauss; son-in-law, Brian Strauss; granddaughter, Adele Lynch; brothers, Russell and Michael Traher; sistersin-law, Patty and Greer Traher, and 11 nieces and nephews.

WILLIAM HAROLD TYLER III

January 8, 1933-August 13, 2024

Bill passed away peacefully in Pebble Beach, California on August 13, 2024, with Susanne, his Wife of 67 years, by his side. He was truly one of a kind; a natural born leader with a quiet charisma. He had a unique ability to find a positive solution in every situation which paved the way for a successful life.

Businessman, entrepreneur, philanthropist and Air Force veteran were just a few of his accomplishments during his 91 years of a life well lived. Bill also had an infectious passion for various activities. He was an avid collector of antique toys and memorabilia, military historian, world traveler, movie and vintage car buff, amateur artist and architect and game enthusiast; he taught his daughters to ski, play tennis and also loved to challenge his children and grandchildren to a lively game of dominoes or chess.

His parents, Lura and Harold Tyler, were early pioneers who settled in the Imperial Valley of Southern California in the 1920s. Bill's entrepreneurial spirit began as a young boy with a little red wagon, a Christmas present that he used to sell ripe cantaloupes collected from the local packing shed and sold throughout his neighborhood.

He earned a B.A. and M.A. in economics and was President of his Sigma Chi fraternity at UC Berkeley. However, his most important accomplishment in college was the day he met Susanne at a local picnic.

After graduation, the newlyweds spent their honeymoon traveling to Lackland Air Force Base in Texas to begin his pilot training. After his three years of service, he began a long career in both the insurance

Deirdre and Larry also had a condo in San Francisco and enjoyed attending the San Francisco Giants baseball and 49er football games as well as the wonderful San Francisco restaurants. Deirdre had a love for Hawaii and after several visits she and Larry purchased a condo on the Big Island on the Mauna Kea Properties and later an additional villa, where they spent several months throughout the year.

Deirdre will be missed terribly, but never forgotten and always remembered for her beautiful smile, her kindness and her joy for life.

A celebration of her life will be held for her family and friends at a later date. The family has requested no flowers, but donations can be made in her name to the SPCA of Monterey County.

business and real estate industry.

Bill particularly enjoyed his service on many boards and philanthropic endeavors. He was former President of both the Palo Alto Jaycees and the Carmel Public Library Foundation, earned the Significant Sig distinction, was a recipient of the Carmel Rotary Community Service Award, a 2016 Distinguished Trustee of the Community Foundation of Monterey County, the 2023 Philanthropist of the Year for the Central Coast and founder of the Tyler Center for Global Studies.

He leaves behind his wife Susanne, daughters Kathleen Wood (Charles), Marlene Ciatti (John) and Amy Tyler; eight grandchildren, four great-grandchildren, his brother Jack and nephews Allen and David.

Words cannot express how grateful our family is for the support from the nurses of Hospice of the Central Coast and Ileini, along with her team of devoted caregivers from Ileini's Care of Monterey. Their kindness will always be remembered with deep gratitude.

Richard Burton Moore was born April 22, 1929. He passed away August 6, 2024, at 95 years of age. He most recently was a resident of Elk Grove, CA but is considered a native to Carmel. He lived more than 60 years of his long and remarkable life in Carmel, Monterey and Carmel Valley. He grew up in Carmel, graduating from Carmel High School in 1947. One year later he enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps and proudly served during the Korean War from 1949-1953. He returned to Carmel, working once again for his father-in-law, Jim Burgess at Richfield/Burgess Auto Service at Seventh and San Carlos. At this time, he met the love of his life, Edith Gierer. #### MAUREEN SUE MASON aureen Sue Mason helped so many people in this world as a concerned citizen, friend and businesswoman. Her loving family was by her side when she peacefully passed away on June 6, 2023, in her Pacific Grove home.

Maureen was born in San Francisco in 1946. She grew up in a less populated Marin County where nature abounded and provided, in her words, opportunities for "aimless wandering." As an adult she spent 17 years in Chicago and explored the Midwest before returning to California in 1983. The beauty of the Monterey Peninsula nourished her soul. She commented "I was fortunate to come to the Monterey Peninsula. Point Lobos was the place I visited more than any other in my first few years back in California. I was also lucky to be in the first Guide class at the Monterey Bay Aquarium, where I developed a love of marine invertebrates that has never abated."

She was a successful, well-known and respected Realtor for more than 30 years. Whatever the endeavor, Maureen was noted for her intelligence, generosity, wit and honest communication. Making the world a better place was her guiding principle. Her active civic life in Pacific Grove included positions on the Pacific Grove Historical Resources Committee and Housing Advisory Group, the non-profit board of Everyone's Harvest, Citizens for Sustainable Monterey County Board and the Friends of Hopkins Marine Station Board. She was awarded Volunteer of the Year in 2016 by the City of Pacific Grove. She was also Bill Peake's campaign manager when he successfully ran for mayor in 2018.

Maureen found a reserve of energy to remain vibrant even after she was diagnosed with colorectal cancer metastasized to the liver. Chemotherapy helped her continue with substantial strength for more than three years. As she once explained: "I find myself being energized and restored each time I volunteer at Point Lobos. The Reserve is a joyous and integral part of my healing journey." Ultimately, the chemo no longer worked and other attempts to fight the cancer were to no avail. As with everything in her life, Maureen made each day of those three years count through meaningful connections and gratitude, continuing as an inspiration to others.

Antonia Alma Bertero Weldon

Antonia Alma Bertero Weldon died on August 13, 2024. She was born the second youngest and third of four daughters to Dr. and Mrs. Jules and Mary (Connolly) Bertero, on March 24, 1937, in Santa Maria, California. She was reared and educated in Santa Maria before departing and completing college at the San Francisco College for Women/Lone Mountain (University of San Francisco). She earned her bachelor of arts in 1959, and she subsequently became a primary school teacher thereafter. She worked (sporadically) as a substitute teacher over the next four decades throughout the State of California (San Francisco, Sacramento, Santa Maria, Los Angeles, Bakersfield and Fresno) while raising her children. Upon the jettison of her last child from the nest in 1987, she retired from this field to focus on her hobbies, her husband, and her dogs in the last third of her life.

Joining her in life (and nearly birth) was Thomas Patrick Weldon, Jr., who was born nine days before her and grew up some two blocks (Pershing Street) away from her childhood home on Broadway. Besides sharing the same nursery, they attended primary and secondary school together, in addition to attending colleges (Santa Clara [Tom] and Lone Mountain/San Francisco College of Women [University of San Francisco]) in the Bay Area. They graduated in 1959, married in 1960, and proceeded to have seven children in the next decade who received their love and attention. They lived in multiple cities in California (and even Arizona for a short time) during their decades of child-rearing with the final stint in Fresno. They then decamped to the Monterey Coast where they remained for more than 30 years until their deaths.

Antonia, like Tom, was an avid gardener, and they adored immensely their many Golden Retrievers with whom they shared an abode. She also swam daily, was a seasoned watercolorist, and was devoted to the French language and culture. These were not just hobbies, but passions that sustained her over the course of her entire life regardless of city in which she lived or the tasks before her. Dozens and dozens of paintings, books on all-things French, and her beloved paddle board were remnants of these cherished activities. Furthermore, she and Tom were devout members of the Catholic Church, attending Mass daily during their lives. They enjoyed immensely the serenity, beauty and (matching) pastoral activity of the Carmel Mission, and the opportunity to delve into Catholicism in a stunning and stimulating environment brought an enriched presence to their daily sojourns there.

Most importantly, their life was filled with friends and family, meals and memories, and drinks and discussions. The mild weather, view of the Pacific Ocean, and proximity to the waves and sand provided a necessary panacea for her physical ailments when they moved to the Monterey area in retirement. This location provided an easy opportunity to travel to see their parents, siblings, children, grandchildren and friends, in addition to the family farm in Guadalupe until their health prevented such excursions. Together for nine decades and married for 62 years, they built a wonderful life for them and their children. One might even say, "they won the race." Tom died in July, 2022, and she died peacefully in August, 2024, surrounded by family, and her loving caregiver, Charito Serano. In addition to her husband (Tom), she is predeceased by her siblings (Mary Theresa, Ursula, and Marta), her parents (Jules and Mary), and one child (Mary Noel). She is survived by six children, (Thomas [Wendy], Mary [Michael], Timothy [Clodagh], Terrence, Kieran, and Christopher [Karin]); 16 nieces and nephews, and 17 grandchildren. As in birth, Tom and Antonia will be joined in death, and all services commemorating their lives will be held in time.

DEAN S. DIAZ JR.

April 5, 1942 - July 12, 2024

Dean S. Diaz Jr. was born in Salinas, California, to Dean Sr. and Jennie Diaz. He met his father for the first time when he was 4, after Dean Sr. returned from World War II. Dean grew up surrounded by a large extended family in the Alisal and Salinas area, enjoying his teenage years in the 1950s. With his James Dean-inspired look of Levis and white T-shirts, he drove a 1948 Dodge coupe to Salinas High School. He loved cruising Main Street and listening to Wolfman Jack, often ending his outings at Mel's Drive-In for burgers, fries, shakes and a chance to watch girls and cars.

Dean decided to join the Navy, inspired by his father's service and eager to see the world. After basic training in San Diego, he worked at Balboa Naval Hospital and was then assigned to Oak Knoll Naval Hospital in Oakland, California, as a Navy Corpsman caring for officers, including ing tor otticers, including Admiral Nimitz. He jokingly remarked that the only boat ride he experienced in the Navy was the ferry from San Diego to Coronado, where he enjoyed staying at a hotel and would often shout "Ahoy Mates!" as he passed by battleships and carriers.

After returning to Salinas and attending Hartnell College, he met Jossie Espinoza at a James Brown concert at the Salinas Armory. They danced that night and had their first official date at the Como Del Rodeo Parade during Big Week. The couple married just a few months later in 1963.

In October 1963, a month before their wedding, the Diaz family opened Plaza Linda Mexican restaurant in Carmel Valley Village, California. They became a vital part of the community, serving cowboys and ranchers who rode up for traditional Mexican food. The restaurant became a cherished gathering place for families over the years, creating lasting relationships with patrons and community members. They also formed meaningful connections with members of City of The Lord, who became like family, and with those from Our Lady of Mount Carmel. For more than 20 years, men from various denominations met weekly at 6 a.m. at Plaza Linda for fellowship and praise, calling their gatherings "Taco Temple." Many friendships formed during these meetings endured until his passing.

Dean had a love for travel, whether planned or spontaneous, along with a passion for painting, storytelling, Christmas traditions and reading. He enjoyed gardening, biking, rollerblading and traveling by any means, including horseback and camels. He cherished dancing with Jossie whenever they could. Following her passing, he spent time exploring Monterey and San Diego while maintaining his routine of attending Mass, taking naps and biking. Although he kept busy, Monterey always felt like home, and he missed Jossie deeply.

He is preceded in death by his wife, Jossie; his parents, Dean Sr. and Jennie; and his sister, Sandra. He is survived by his brother, John; his sons, Rob and Rene (Massie and Gizelle), and many friends and relatives. He will be profoundly missed.

Taking vs. producing

FORMER FIRST Lady Michelle Obama made a very telling comment during her speech to the Democratic National Convention Tuesday night. Thanking her parents for the values they instilled in her, Obama said they "showed me the meaning of hard work and humility and decency" and "didn't aspire to be wealthy."

In fact, her mother and father "were suspicious of folks who took more than they needed," she said.

Plenty of commentators have highlighted this remark, pointing out that Obama and her husband, the former president, have at least four expensive homes, a net worth upward of $50 million, and obviously enjoy a life filled with possessions and material comforts that are way more than they need.

Not that they're living beyond their means, though. Since Barack Obama's eight years in the White House, he and his wife have made lots and lots of money, some of it for very little work. According to the Daily Mail, for example, Ms. Obama was paid "nearly $750,000 for a one-hour speech at a tech fair in Munich, Germany," in September.

She "picked up the eye-watering check" for speaking to so some 5,000 attendees on how to "push past self-doubt," while also emphasizing the importance of "inclusivity and diversity," the newspaper said.

But none of that is what we thought was striking about Ms. Obama's comments. What struck us was something much more fundamental: Her idea that rich people are guilty of "taking more than they need," whereas most of today's rich get that way by producing, not taking.

The point is one Elon Musk — who started several successful companies and is one of the richest people on the planet — made during the Covid epidemic, when the idea was circulating that everybody could just stay home and get paid by the government.

"Some people have this absurd view that the economy is like a magic horn of plenty, and if somebody has more stuff, it's because they took more from the magic horn of plenty," Musk said.

But in reality, he added, the horn of plenty is full because so many people are working to keep it that way.

"If you don't make stuff, there's no stuff," Musk said. "If you don't make the food, if you don't process food, if you don't transport the food, there is no food." And the same thing is true for all the material things and institutions we all depend on every day.

But not everybody is working, or inventing, or investing the same as everybody else. Even among people who have full-time jobs, some are only a little productive, while others are immensely productive. And it is their productivity that makes them rich, not their greed.

Conflicts of interests Dear Editor,

How could a sitting city council member not recuse herself from voting last April on the Housing Element Update when she was a founding member and long-time Board member of LandWatch, the watchdog organization pushing housing density all over the state and in Carmel?

Yet, even when a member of the public pointed out this obvious conflict of interest before the vote to approve the Housing Element and its 349 housing units to be crammed into our village, she refused to recuse herself. The evidence did not persuade or shame her into compliance, and the city attorney made excuses as to why case, it was her own personal interests, as she repeatedly claimed her house was very hard to find, including in a revealing interview with the Canadian Broadcast Corp. In that interview she also stated a need to conform with the Patriot Act and Securities Act. Why didn't she inform the public of her desire to enforce the Patriot and Securities Act in Carmel-by-the-Sea? What possible role is that of the city council and why is she so interested in surveilling us?

Adding insult to injury, she rushed and promoted the street numbers with false and misleading claims about long emergency response times, violations of the fire code, and exaggerated need for more convenience. But the 3.5 minute response time in Carmel is half the national average for urban areas, the fire code has never been violated for over 100 years, and anyone who can't live in Carmel with an inconvenience can move. The history, character, and uniqueness of this village are much more important than those who can't deal with inconveniences. Her self-serving arguments never legitimately justified the "need" for street numbers. She should be recused, her vote negated, and the address debacle dropped with extreme prejudice. Charles Najarian, Carmel

One of the good guys who took down some really bad ones

PEBBLE BEACH author Gregory Lee's first novel, "Stinger," is an international thriller that was published in March. After authoring three textbooks in the early 2000s — "Global Drug Enforcement," "Conspiracy Investigations," and "Practical Criminal Evidence" - the retired Army Criminal Investigations Division officer and Drug Enforcement Administration investigator finally completed the novel he had started working on years ago.

Volunteered in 1972

With more than 50 years of experience, including as an expert witness and a criminal justice consultant, Lee has a resume that includes helping to arrest Ramzi Yousef, who was behind the 1993 World Trade Center bombing and other terrorist plots to kill Americans.

The path that led there started when Lee was 17 and joined the L.A. County Sheriff's Explorers program - his cousin was in law enforcement — and spent 500 hours doing ride-alongs in patrol cars. In 1972, when he was 19 years old, his birthday was No. 1 in the lottery, meaning men who shared it would be the first to be inducted into the military and possibly sent to Vietnam.

Like many others of his generation, he volunteered for the Army so that he could have some say in what his specialty would be. He chose the military police, and although the war ended the day he finished his training as an MP, draftees up to number 20 had been inducted that year, so he figured he'd chosen wisely.

Lee became an investigator with the Army's criminal investigation division, which deals with felonies — as opposed to the military police, who work mainly on misdemeanors.

'Miami Vice'

He was an Army warrant officer, a rank reserved for subject matter experts and specialists, including helicopter pilots, nuclear weapons maintenance personnel, and other technical professionals. Before retiring from the Reserves in 2012, he'd achieved the top rank of chief warrant officer five — a remarkable achievement, given there are only about 500 of them on duty in today's Army.

His career brought him to Fort Ord, where he left active duty in 1980 and became a Salinas Police officer — a job he said he enjoyed. A year later, his wife, Virginia, a federal employee, was transferred to Pasadena. He joined the police department there, but when he heard about openings in the DEA, he changed his path.

Those early years of service, Lee said, were "during the days of 'Miami Vice," with drug dealers trying to emulate the flashy criminals they saw in the TV series. Chasing the bad guys in Southern California amid rapidly changing trends in trafficking methamphetamine, cocaine and heroin, he said he sometimes dealt with two shootings a week.

He was later assigned to Monterey, and, after a stint teaching at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va., he returned to field work in Islamabad, Pakistan.

The assignment in Islamabad was pretty nifty, he said - a "nice embassy" with great housing where he and Virginia, who was working as a DEA intelligence analyst, and their two young sons could live quite well for relatively little money.

Getting Yousef They arrived there in 1994, the year after Yousef had overseen the bombing of the World Trade Center in New York City which killed six people and injured more than 1,000 others. He was still on the run and planning an attack you've probably never heard of. Lee explained that Yousef's foiled "Bojinka" plot included among other things — simultaneously blowing up 12 airliners while they were over the Pacific Ocean between Asia and the United States.

Although author Gregory Lee's latest book is fictional, his real-life experiences also make for good reading

CLASSES WITH REMBRANDT, GOYA, MICHELANGELO - --- AND SOME NUNS

SUSAN MANCHESTER was just 20 years old in 1962 when her mother drove her from their Santa Barbara home to the L.A. Airport and put her on a flight to New York City, where she boarded the SS Cristoforo Colombo for an eight-day voyage to Italy.

She was traveling alone, knew nobody on the ship, spoke rudimentary Italian, and had no one waiting on the other side of the Atlantic.

"The world was simpler and safer then," remembered Manchester, a Carmel-by-the-Sea artist and former York School art instructor. "I was naïve, but confident enough about my choices that I didn't entertain much fear.

"I wanted to study art in the seat of the Renaissance and assess the ancients," she said. "I always had this desire not to be underestimated or mistaken for a frivolous student of the arts."

Studying the originals

With parental approval and encouragement from instructors at UC Santa Barbara, she enrolled at the Accademia di Belle Arti in Florence, where, for over a year, she studied drawing, painting and printmaking in an environment steeped in the history of Leonardo da Vinci and other masters.

"I was not very skilled, but I worked at it through continuous drawing, etching, and painting classes," Manchester said.

With permission from the head of the school, she spent every morning at the Uffizi Gallery Library of Prints and Drawings, looking at original drawings by Renaissance artists, including Rembrandt and Michelangelo.

"I studied the paintings of artists like Caravaggio and Goya, as well as the etchings of my teacher, Giorgio Morandi, a celebrated painter and printmaker."

'Signorina Rembrandt!'

Manchester first encountered the legendary Morandi — "The Maestro" of Accademia di Belle Arti - when he slipped quietly into the classroom and stood behind her as she pulled an etching off the press.

"It was my own version of a Rembrandt etching, 'Tobias and the Angel,'" she remembered. "He looked at my etching and called me 'Signorina Rembrandt!' He was an elderly man, and I didn't even realize who he was until the other students ran over and told me."

For the young student, the experience in Italy was life-altering, and her education there still impacts the art she creates today in a second-floor studio at the Church of the Wayfarer.

Manchester spent that Christmas in Rome with Marguerite Courtney, whom she called "La Mama." She was the mother of a fellow art student.

"La Mama was friends with a young Augustinian monk who arranged an audience of about 100 people with Pope John XXIII," she said. "The pope spoke for about 30 minutes in three languages, blessed us, and then was kind of yanked off the stage. He liked to talk!"

The monk then took Manchester and La Mama on an impromptu tour that included the pope's private apartment, gardens and his private chapel, where they found themselves standing between two breathtaking Michelangelo frescoes, "The Conversion of Saul" and "The Crucifixion of St. Peter."

"It was, of course, mind-blowing for me," she said.

Mexico to Santa Barbara

Manchester, the youngest of three children, spent the first three years of her life near Mexico City, where her father, a Stanford graduate, was negotiating a deal for the U.S. government. She learned Spanish before she could speak English.

Fun fact: When Manchester was a toddler, her mother took her to have her ears pierced by Wilhelm Loeser, a physician who had been exiled from the United States for altering the fingerprints of American gangster John Dillinger. "It's my only claim to fame," she quipped.

The Manchesters moved from Mexico to Pasadena, then Santa Barbara, where Ocean and Dolores. It appeared Mueller had been drinking, and after he failed to perform field sobriety tests and did not consent to a blood draw, CPD officer Tim Ament wrote and executed a search warrant for a blood sample from Mueller.

He was arrested for DUI, and his vehicle was towed.

On Aug. 16, a 1964 Chevy Impala was reported stolen from the parking garage at Carmel Plaza. While on the way home, one of the police department's dispatchers saw the distinctive vintage car in the turnout on Highway 1 near Carpenter Street and notified CPD, but by the time officers got there, the vehicle was gone, Maldonado said.

"Knowing that the stolen vehicle was not too far ahead, officer Tim Ament and officer Rene Guevera conducted an area check on Highway 1," he said, and they soon learned a California Highway Patrol officer was behind the car on the highway near the Reservation Road exit. With the help of CHP and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office, the two men suspected of stealing the car — 64-year-old Trent Mack and 41-year-old Tony Broomfield, both from Los Angeles - were arrested and taken to Monterey County Jail.

"The vehicle was released to the victim without any damage to it," Maldonado said. "This was a great example of agencies working together. We are very grateful for the help we got from CHP and the sheriff's office."

The unnamed owners, who had just spent 25 years restoring the car and had brought it to Car Week to celebrate, were also very grateful. "Seeing them depressed as they made the report was rough," Maldonado said. "At the scene, they were thankful and hugged me."

Impromptu show

To stop the drag-racing and other antics that occurred on Ocean Avenue in pre-pandemic years, police and the public works department set up barricades each night to divert traffic through downtown streets.

While that practice has deterred street stunts, it has also in effect turned the central commercial district into a sort of ghost town, but this year, officers allowed owners and drivers of special cars to park within the barricaded areas, making for an impromptu nighttime car show that drew crowds but kept the shenanigans to a minimum. Police also maintained a strong presence downtown during those hours.

met the minimum after officials checked 27 of the signatures he collected, meaning that seven were found invalid and the remaining three were left unchecked. One of his signers isn't registered to vote, four listed different addresses than what's on file with the registrar, one signature doesn't match voter registration records, and one person didn't sign at all.

Of the 30 signatures Bob Delves submitted, officials checked 24 before deeming his council candidacy valid, rejecting three as belonging to people who are not registered voters and one because the address didn't match the record on file.

Council candidate David O'Neil, who only submitted 27 signatures, had two found invalid due to not being registered voters before securing his spot on the ballot, and Hans Buder had three rejected for the same reason before he qualified as a candidate for city council.

In the race for mayor, Dale Byrne, who was the first person to have his papers deemed complete, had 25 of the 30 signatures he submitted checked. The five found invalid included three belonging to people who are not registered to vote here, one with an incomplete address and one in which someone else had filled out the address field

Incumbent Mayor Dave Potter qualified after 22 signatures were checked, with two belonging to residents registered at different addresses and the remaining eight of the 30 signatures on his form left unchecked.

Only mayoral candidate Jeff Baron, a city councilman, had none of the first 20 signatures on his papers rejected.

Sorenson told The Pine Cone that when a pair of bald eagles was seen nesting in Monterey County in 1995, it marked the first time since 1934 that a breeding pair had been observed locally. In fact, he noted that the last bald eagle nest in Big Sur was discovered during the construction of Highway 1 in the 1930s.

Sorenson noted that while DDT took a cruel toll on the species, another manmade innovation — the reservoir — benefited them.

"In the 1950s and 1960s, California built a whole lot of reservoirs for agriculture and drinking water," Sorenson explained. "When that happened, it created more habitat for bald eagles."

Sorenson noted that the best place to see the birds in the county is Lake San Antonio, which was built in 1965.

With bald eagles, researchers discovered that if the threat of DDT could be eliminated, the population could rebound, Sorenson said. DDT was outlawed by the federal government in 1972.

"Once DDT was banned and began slowly dissipating from the environment, bald eagles started reproducing successfully again," he said. "By 1995, we realized the population was ready to take off."

Today, the VWS releases condors at the same site where bald eagles were once sent back into the wild.

In the City of Monterey Aug. 14-18, police reported stopping 251 drivers for various infractions and writing 165 citations, according to Monterey P.D.'s statistics. Officers towed five vehicles and made 18 arrests.

MPD records indicate that while several of those arrests involved drug offenses and probation violations, eight of them were for violating the vehicle code, including three for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, two for engaging in illegal speed contests, and one for reckless driving. Some of the drivers either had suspended licenses or no licenses at all.

"We had 12 documented collisions during Car Week," added the city's communications manager, Laurie Huelga. "This does not include collisions where information was exchanged between the drivers and no report was taken."

Pacific Grove Police Cmdr. Brian Anderson reported his city's officers stopped 39 drivers during Car Week and wrote a dozen tickets from those, including seven for unsafe speed, two for failing to stop at a stop sign, two for violating laws on vehicle lights, and one for failing to yield to a pedestrian. "No arrests were made in conjunction with Car Week," he said.

CHP very busy

With the largest jurisdiction of any law-enforcement agency, including responsibility for highways 101 and 68, as well as Pebble Beach and parts of Carmel and Carmel Valley, California Highway Patrol officers were very busy during the main Car Week weekend, from Friday, Aug. 16, to Sunday, Aug. 18. During those days, officers wrote 207 tickets, including eight that were elevated to misdemeanors.

Among those cited earlier in the week was a group of nine Porsches, McLarens, Lamborghinis and Ferraris pulled over en masse on southbound Highway 1 near Lightfighter Drive Aug. 14.

The CHP responded to 33 crashes from Friday to Sunday, according to officer Saul Perez. While eight of those were on Highway 101 and another 11 were in the Salinas area or inland in North County, more than a dozen were in or around the Peninsula.

Perez said the agency handled wrecks in Pebble Beach, on private property next to Carmel Rancho Boulevard, on Soledad Drive near the on-ramp to Highway 1, and on private property east of Highway 1. Nine occurred on Highway 1, including incidents near Morse Drive, Munras, Salinas Road, Holman Highway, Riley Ranch, Highway 68, Lightfighter Drive, CHP officers arrested 11 people for DUI, including a motorist whose car was disabled on Highway 68 at Olmsted Road. The driver "reversed and collided into the officer's patrol vehicle," according to the CHP. "An investigation was conducted, and the driver was subsequently arrested for DUI (drugs)." Nobody was hurt.

'Spectacle'

One anonymous resident, ostensibly in the Carmel Highlands, complained that Car Week "has morphed into a full-blown spectacle that is increasingly disrupting the lives of local residents."

"What began as a relatively subdued gathering of car aficionados has escalated into a chaotic frenzy," the person said, referring to Car Week's origins with a lowkey show on the 18th Fairway at the Pebble Beach Golf Links and accompanying road race there 74 years ago.

"Locals are growing weary of the incessant noise pollution and the reckless driving that accompanies these events," the person wrote. "While tourists may be captivated by the spectacle, residents are increasingly frustrated by the disruption to their daily lives.

"Adding to the problem is the rise of social media influencers who are desperate to capture the action, often disregarding traffic laws and endangering themselves and others in pursuit of the perfect shot," the anonymous complainer continued. "Their aggressive driving has created a dangerous environment for everyone."

Monterey County Fair turns out to be a lot older than it thinks it is

THE MONTEREY County Fair returns to the fairgrounds Aug. 29 to Sept. 2. My research on how the event began started with the official site: montereycountyfair.com, which offers that the Monterey County Fair & Event Center is a "22-acre, state-owned venue located in the heart of Monterey," and that the first county fair was held there in 1935. "Since then," according to the fair's website, "not only has the fair continued annually but the Monterey County Fair & Event Center has become the site for an eclectic mix of public and private events ....'

It did not take long for me to find information about the origins of the fair and the grounds that conflicted. I messaged the fairgrounds for clarification. No response. I continued digging, and when I was convinced their history

History Beat

By NEAL HOTELLING

- both as to date and location - was in error, I wrote again. Still no response. So, to inform Pine Cone readers of the real story, I share my research here.

The earliest reference I could find to a Monterey County Fair was in 1876. The Fresno Weekly Republican published a talk on "The Value of Trees" that was reportedly given at the 1876 fair by the Hon. C.S. Abbott. This was followed by a June 1878 article in the Sacramento Weekly Bee that reported the dates of several county and district fairs that year. The Monterey County District Fair for that year was in Salinas Oct. 15-19. That city continued to host a Monterey County Fair annually through 1896, although by the 1890s, horse racing became the primary draw.

Nearly forgotten

After a hiatus, the regional agricultural district pulled together another county fair in 1900. It offered a variety of exhibits in addition to racing. However, after that the Monterey County Fair was sporadic at best and apparently forgotten.

In 1924, The Pine Cone reported: "Monterey County is at last to have a county fair. It is for one day only, Oct. 31, at King City." Fairs in King City continued for a few years. The Peninsula Daily Herald (Sept. 14, 1926) affirms that a successful 1925 event was expanded in 1926 to three days, Sept. 24-26, with six classes of exhibits. However, it ceased after 1926.

A few years later, Peninsula leaders picked up the baton and created the 1930 Monterey County Fair which was held at the Del Monte polo grounds on land directly behind the modern fairgrounds of today. It was billed as the first.

The Aug. 22, 1930, Pine Cone declared "the first annual Monterey County Fair will be held in Monterey, Oct. 8-12 with a complete program of horse racing, polo, steeplechasing, and exhibits of many agricultural, industrial, and educational institutions of the county

Who's who

Samuel F.B. Morse, president of Del Monte Properties Co. which owned the polo grounds, served as president of the newly organized Monterey County Fair organization. The board of directors reads like a "Who's Who" of early 20th century Monterey County, including Mayor San Madeira, Harvey Abbott of Salinas, Knut Hovden, Will Jacks, Stuart Haldorn and Allen Griffin of Monterey, Ed Hatton, Henry Russell, Ben Schulte and Charles Van Riper of Carmel and Carmel Vallev and Col. Roger Fitch of the Monterey Presidio.

Organizers of the 1930 fair chose to hire for experience and contracted with Ed Vollman and Jack Campbell, longtime general manager and stock manager, respectively, of the large San Joaquin County Fair. The 1930 Monterey County Fair was greeted with praise, not only for its programming, but for proving that diverse districts could work together "in putting over a project that is beneficial to the entire county."

Community leader Arthur G. Metz was chairman of the 1931 fair, which again used the polo grounds. The Pine Cone's report on the 1931 fair focused on the art exhibit, curated by Francis McComas, Armin Hansen and Paul Whitman, but it was a full-fledged fair, and well attended. Dates for the 1932 Monterey County Fair were set for Sept. 29 through Oct. 2 and appeared in published calendars throughout the state, but the event never happened. The Great Depression had reached the Peninsula.

To help publicize the 1930 Monterey County Fair, Kitty Varien and Constance Heron (daughter of Herb) posed with Coronation, a huge Gurnsey bull that was entered in fair's livestock competition from Carmel Valley's Del Monte Rancho.

> In late 1934, publisher Allen Griffin editorialized in the Monterey Peninsula Herald in favor of a 1935 county fair. He pointed out that the state was helping fund such events through funds paid from betting at fairground horse races.

> The Monterey County Board of Supervisors listened and, in January 1935, took action to hold a county fair that fall at the Del Monte polo grounds and petitioned the state for $40,000. The county's plans were squashed in February, when the state budget office informed the county that it was not eligible for 1935 funding because it had not held a 1934 county fair.

> There was more to the story. Nevertheless, despite what is claimed on the fairgrounds website today, there was not a Monterey County Fair, nor even the fairgrounds in 1935. Next week, I will share how and when the Monterey County Fairgrounds came to be.

EVICTED

On Wednesday, Jacques recounted the moment last week in which she was served with the three-day notice.

"I was really surprised," she said. "Because I have been taken care of for years."

The Pine Cone asked Jacques where she would move to if she was forced out her apartment.

"I have nowhere to go. The only thing I have is my Social Security," she said, adding, "I'm not going to leave. I have no place to go. I'm 96 and I'm no spring chicken.'

When Jacques stopped paying rent because she couldn't afford it is unclear, but a provision of the California Health and Safety Code indicates that a "life care contract shall include provisions to subsidize residents who become financially unable to pay their monthly care fees."

Diana Jimenez, deputy director of Aging and Adult Services in the Monterey County Department of Social Services, said seniors are increasingly struggling to find facilities they can afford.

rights and investigate complaints on behalf of residents in long-term facilities," according to its website, shorturl.at/ h97hN. The program, part of the Alliance on Aging, can also be reached at (831) 655-1334.

Contracts honored?

When Forest Hill Manor was sold to Pacifica Senior Living about two years ago, a condition of the sale included honoring all of Forest Hill Manor's existing life care contracts, said Sadler, who has a copy of Jacques' agreement.

The eviction notice "appears to be out of compliance with Pacifica's commitment to honor the legacy contracts from Forest Hill Manor," Sadler said.

If Jacques is thrown out, other residents with similar contract terms are fearful they'll also be evicted.

Sanchez did not respond to questions about the three-day notice she gave to Jacques. The eviction process in California can take at least 30 days.

In any event, Sadler said Jacques does not have the money to pay the $109,000.

The Monterey Peninsula is home to hundreds of small businesses, including many owned and run by dynamic, entrepreneurial women whose success stories are an inspiration to us all.

Dispute resolution

While there's no perfect solution, Jimenez recommended that people who've outlived their savings immediately apply for Medi-Cal, the federal government's medical insurance for the indigent. While Medi-Cal does not require someone to disclose their assets to be covered, if someone has income over a certain threshold, they might be required to pay a portion of the costs. Anyone over 65 is also eligible for Medicare, but it does not pay for senior living services.

Seniors who have disputes with nursing homes or residential care facilities should contact the county Ombudsmen's office, Jimenez said, which is certified to help resolve the problems of residents in such facilities.

'Ombudsmen advocate for residents'

Her story is the latest complaint from Pacific Grove Senior Living residents. Earlier this month, a resident documented more than two dozen instances within about nine months where there was no hot water or heat in the facility's south wing.

"Three longtime residents have left in frustration this month," Sadler said. "If we don't get this fixed urgently, we can expect more people to vote with their feet."

When the nonprofit California-Nevada Methodist Homes sold Forest Hill to the for-profit Pacifica Companies in December 2022, state Attorney General Rob Bonta imposed 18 conditions, including the assumption of residents' preexisting contracts with the former owner and the appointment of a monitor to ensure the facility's compliance with professional standards of care.

In March, though, a consultant hired by Bonta concluded, among other things, that the new owners of the P.G. senior facility had failed to acknowledge and honor "multiple preexisting contracts."

Next week The Carmel Pine Cone will honor them with a special edition!

Susan's mother — unimpressed with the public school system — enrolled her daughter in a convent school operated by French nuns.

"I had no religious background at all, but we all learned to chant in Latin, and we prayed in French," she reflected.

'That school was in an old Italianate villa on a beautiful piece of property," she recalled. "And since my family wasn't Catholic, I wasn't at all worried about going to hell, so it was all pretty fascinating to me.'

Her mother embraced Santa Barbara's cultural offerings, particularly theater, art and music. The Manchesters owned a grand piano and a bass piano.

"My mother was the type of woman who did things because she didn't know that she couldn't," Manchester said with a laugh. "She was the first woman in Santa Barbara to have a talk show on the radio and interviewed a lot of interesting people — authors who hyped their books, people who believed in UFOs - all kinds.'

Drawing is her 'true north'

Manchester earned her high school diploma from Marymount School, a Catholic academy where her art interests were usurped by five hours of homework most nights.

But she began drawing again after enrolling at UC Santa Barbara.

"I'm also a painter, of course, but drawing has always been my 'true north,'" she said. "I actually do some of my best drawings while I'm talking on the phone."

At 21, Manchester returned from Italy a more serious artist. "My art vector was set in Florence," she said.

Santa Barbara's art community lacked "edge," Manchester decided, so she moved to North Beach in San Francisco, near the San Francisco Art Institute, where she studied with figurative artist Gordon Cook.

"But I didn't stick around for a degree," she said. Her Florentine training and eagerness to learn helped her land a job as an architectural draftsman. That experience brought her to the Monterey Peninsula, where she worked three years for Burde Shaw & Associates.

Monterey also is where she first noticed David Allen Smith, a residential architect who worked on the other side of the business complex. They were married in 1974 and celebrated their 50th anniversary this year.

Sketches at the Smithsonian

After leaving Burde Shaw, Manchester found her first job as an artist when she was hired by the Hopkins Marine Station to help create illustrations for a 1992 Stanford University Press publication, "Marine Algae of California."

The textbook is still in use, and Manchester's original drawings are now at the Smithsonian Institute and are frequently borrowed by institutions all over the world.

In 1980, she was invited to upgrade the art program at York School in Monterey, where she served as department director and taught four days a week for 14 years.

"That teaching job gave me time to create my own drawings and paintings and build a body of work," said Manchester, who showed her art for 10 years at the Edith Caldwell Gallery and other San Francisco galleries.

She has been represented in Carmel-by-the-Sea since 2011 by the Winfield Gallery (Dolores between Ocean and Seventh) and shows at the Andra Norris Gallery in Burlingame.

"Not to dramatize it, but making art is my lifeline," said the artist. "When I enter my studio, the weight of the world evaporates. I've had some spectacular experiences in both the local and grand-scale art spheres, for which I am eternally grateful.<sup>3</sup>

Manchester's portfolio features delicate drawings and soft-palette paintings, including portraits, figures, still-life botany, and what she calls "the floating world" - feathers and winged creatures.

She is creating work for a multi-artist exhibition planned for this fall at Winfield Gallery. For additional information and to view images of her art, visit susanmanchesterart.com.

Funding for the $38 million facility came from the Taylor family, the Berkshire Foundation, the Packard Foundation, CSUMB reserves and federal funding secured by Rep. Jimmy Panetta.

Taylor said he's honored that the building will be named after his dad, who he called a pioneer in the agriculture industry.

"By supporting Cal State Monterey Bay's science and engineering programs, we are not only honoring his memory but also investing in the future of our community, nurturing talent and supporting innovation," according to Taylor.

The new building's office space for employees of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, will allow CSUMB "to enhance quality learning and research opportunities for our students and faculty while also deepening our collaboration with the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary," CSUMB provost Andrew Lawson said in a statement. Funding for the office space was made possible by $7 million — which is included in the total $38 million cost — from the American taxpayers through the Inflation Reduction Act.

"I'm proud to have helped secure part of that funding for a permanent [NOAA] office to bolster and further our collaborative conservation efforts in California's 19th Congressional District," Panetta said in August 2023 when money for the offices was announced.

In addition, DGDG was ordered to designate an employee to manage and oversee its hazardous waste management and employee training programs. DGDG cooperated with prosecutors during the investigation and took significant steps to improve its compliance with the environmental and consumer protection violations brought to its attention.

The investigation began in 2021 when investigators in Santa Clara conducted unannounced inspections of DGDG trash containers and found hazardous waste and pages of customer records. Additional inspections over the next year turned up violations at the company's businesses in Alameda, Solano, Contra Costa and Monterey counties.

And circumstances in Islamabad were about to make Lee — in his words — "the Forrest Gump" of law enforcement.

He learned from security personnel at the embassy that they'd been contacted by an informant on the Bojinka plot who told officials that Yousef would be in town that Saturday. They arranged for FBI and CIA agents to capture him. However, the terrorist arrived four days early and, they learned, only planned to stick around for 90 minutes.

So, said Lee, "They came to DEA, the only federal law enforcement in the embassy." Working with the State Department, they staked the place out and then went in.

"I was in the hallway when the Pakistani authorities opened the door, and there he was. I collected a lot of evidence in his room about his preparation for the Bojinka plot. He had various U.S. airline timetable books that were in use back then, dog-eared with the planes he was targeting," along with Casio watches with wires soldered onto them for use as timing devices.

9/11 and Kabul

Yousef was convicted and sentenced to life plus 240 years, which he is serving at a maximum security federal prison in Colorado.

Lee became the resident agent in charge of the DEA's Karachi, Pakistan office before being transferred to the DEA'S Los Angeles Division, then retiring in 2003. Throughout his career, he was recalled to active Army service several times, including after 9/11, working with military intelligence to — among other things — assess additional terrorist threats. Between February and April 2011, he was sent to Kabul to evaluate the "Rule of Law" phase of Gen. David Petraeus' plan for Afghanistan.

He's also been a state and federal qualified expert witness, although his bio says he's "winding down his practice" in that area to devote more time to writing. Sounds like he's earned it.

citywide ballot vote. Frank Devendorf explicitly rejected street addresses to foster our unique community. Our village post office opened in 1911. Carmel's first mayor, Alfred Fraser, helped shape young Carmel to have a unique charm and a community-focused atmosphere from 1916 to 1920.

City ordinance 505.1, giving Carmel directional addresses, has been our law since 1926. In 1975, council member Mike Brown brokered a deal with USPS to keep our village post office where it is rather than have it shut down to join the building site on Via Nona Marie.

Brown has it on the best authority possible that the USPS will close our village post office with house numbers. USPS will move to a cheaper method of delivering our mail. Anticipate gang mailboxes throughout our neighborhoods. Our city council does not control the USPS fiscal decision-making process.

Carmel is under radical attack by our city council using unconfirmed claims and false scare tactics to destroy 100 years of history and our village post office. Our council has amended Ordinance 505.1 for its first vote on Sept. 10, "step one" in forcing street addresses upon Carmel without any community meetings, proper discussions, explorations into keeping directional addresses, how to help those frustrated who do not know how to use a directional address for applications, or studying the negative consequences of making the change. Under a lack of transparency and no public committee, Carmel's character and originality will be forever changed by Karen Ferlito, Jeff Baron and Bobby Richards.

California Fire Code does not preclude directional addresses which Carmel has used successfully since its inception. Our lives are not at risk! The National Library of Medicine analyzed 37 million calls in the United States. Carmel's average EMS response time is 3.5 minutes compared to seven minutes nationwide.

Please attend Sept. 10 at 4:30 p.m., city hall, to voice your opinion for a citywide vote.

Up or down vote Dear Editor,

I always enjoy your editorials, especially when some of the letters to the editor cover the same topic, as they did in the most recent edition. In this case, I mostly agree with the editorial and one of the letters: Let's just have an open, transparent, disclosive, interactive forum of some kind on the issue of street addresses, so everyone interested will have the same facts (something that is most decidedly not the case based on available evidence), then put it to a town vote, yes or no, and be done with this. I'm squarely in the yes to house numbers camp, but if it's the majority's will that we not have the option to put up house numbers, then so be it and life will go on.

It's nutty that in 2024, we can't bring this debate to a reasoned, informed conclusion, one way or the other. And, please, let's not seek "divine intervention," as one letter writer espoused. Opening that incendiary can of worms will only distract from the fairly straightforward issue at hand.

Chuck McKenzie, Carmel

Gate happiness Dear Editor,

I was so very happy to see that the Chadwicks had their much-needed gate approved by the planning commission.

Before my husband died two years ago, we lived on Camino Real for a very long time. We had people staring up close into our windows, asking to use our phone, asking to use the bathroom, walking into our yard and even into the backyard. People would pose right up close to the front windows for pictures.

Then my husband bought me a metal giraffe and it got so much worse! People even tried to put their kids on it for pictures, and it was at our front door, which was open a lot. That did not deter them.

CalAm's slant wells by hydrogeological expert analysis are engineered to cause seawater intrusion.

Permitting would enable desal completion, while devastating Marina's potable water supply.

California State Agency Act prohibits SVGB water exportation to Monterey Peninsula.

Permitting violates SGMA.

Permitting creates a serious environmental injustice: Marina is burdened with a sewer treatment facility, landfill dump, and Former Fort Ord World War II ordinance and asbestos-laden barracks removal. Permitting is part of ESHA and would create beach impairment, air-quality pollution, and brine discharge that threatens fish nesting areas.

Permitting jeopardizes Monterey Peninsula ratepayers because water bills would increase 50-70%.

CalAm's desal would obliterate Marina's and farmers' established water rights while violating Public Trust Doctrine CalAm's desal is not needed or wanted: Pure Water Monterey supply projections easily meet demand for thirty-plus years.

CalAm's exorbitant desal project is unlawful and infeasible per CalAm's EIR (no water rights).

The fight against water tyranny and environmental injustice is righteous.

Margaret-Anne Coppernoll, Marina

O'Neil for council Dear Editor,

Rarely does one have the opportunity to so enthusiastically endorse a candidate for public office as the voters do today. David O'Neil will be an asset to the Carmel City Council. Seeking the best solutions to any problem requires a humble approach to understanding complexity of any issue. David has been seeking the opinions of the best and brightest in Carmel and will help the council make good decisions with his input. #### Tvranny vs. justice Dear Editor,

The California State Lands Commission (CSLC) is reviewing California American Water Company's (CalAm) permit application to install four additional slant wells to the currently existing one in Marina. CalAm intends to source its desalination plant with Salinas Valley Groundwater Basin (SVGB) water, threatening Marina's potable water, that is under the Sustainable Groundwater Management Act (SGMA) mandate to restore and preserve these critically over-drafted aquifers. To save Marina's water and protect Monterey Peninsula ratepayers from exploitation, it is incumbent on concerned citizens to express opposition to this permit. Here's why:

glitzy in 2023 that the Central Coast Section playoff committee hoisted them into the section's second-highest division for the postseason playoffs, where unbeaten Carmel (enrollment: 822) inexplicably found itself seeded No. 7 in a powerhouse eight-team bracket.

The competition included Archbishop Mitty (1,768), Sacred Heart Prep (1,408), Live Oak (1,101), Menlo (584), Monterey (1,350), Christopher (1,611), and the second-seeded Soquel Knights (1,095), who beat the Padres 35-14, ending their season.

While the Padres checked in their equipment, the Knights moved on to win the CCS Division 2 title, the NorCal regional, and the 4A state championship.

The CCS subsequently made policy adjustments that theoretically will help protect small-enrollment schools from being matched against behemoths in future playoffs, hopefully resulting in more equitable competition.

That impressive list begins with senior Jackson Lloyd, a 6-foot-7, 285-pound The Padres' 10-0 football record was so offensive tackle who already has committed to play next year at the offensive player for us, but he'll also play on the defensive side in certain situations and against certain opponents. Obviously, he commands a lot of attention wherever he plays," said coach Golden Anderson.

Lloyd and teammates Hudson Rutherford and Simeon Brown also earned all-county plaudits as components of an offense that averaged 43 points and 395.5 yards a game, amassing 2,733 yards through the air, 1,615 on the ground.

Rutherford, a senior and second-vear starter at quarterback. completed 140 of 199 passes (70.4 percent) for 2,409 yards, throwing 27 touchdown passes, with nine interceptions.

Brown, a wing-footed senior, is a three-year starter at wide receiver, caught 35 passes for 724 yards and scored eight times.

Another senior, all-division choice Ty Arnold, led the Padres in receptions with 47 and yards with 726, and tallied eight TDs.

Leaper and sprinter

Other experienced pass-catchers are junior Matt Maxon (10-229, three TDs) and senior Ashton Rees (7-174, one TD), both all-division in the defensive backfield (more about that later). Senior Brooklyn Ashe is a 6-4,185-pound leaper who plays tight end, wide receiver, and is a returning starter in the defensive secondary. Bennett Foreman, a 100- and 200-meter sprinter on the track team, also could have an impact at receiver or running back for the Padres. The other veteran on the offensive line,

The secondary is the most talented part of Carmel's defense, led by Rees, a free safety who was named Most Valuable Player in the Mission South Division as a junior, Maxon, who led the Padres with three interceptions as a strong safety, Ashe, a ball hawk with good hands, Hinds, who started eight games last year at cornerback, Arnold, who also started several games on defense, and Simeon Brown, who can play safety.

Talented sophomores Ethan Haas, Skyler Brown, Lucas Rocha and Kanan Seeklander also will compete for playing time.

Jeremiah Robinson, a third-year varsity player, saw significant playing time last fall at linebacker. Johnson is a strong tackler who plays bigger than his 5-9, 170-pound frame. Other frontliners at that position are to be determined, Anderson said.

Leaders on the defensive line will include quick, explosive Indy Gabrielson, who started 11 games last season as a sophomore, and Robert Beverly, a 6-6, 250-pounder.

Josh Granat, a soccer player, will handle the kicking and punting duties, with Rees, Arnold, and Brown returning kicks. An invaluable intangible, said the coach, is that numerous players on his roster are three-sport athletes who have experienced pressure situations in the past.

"So many of these guys have faced tough situations in other sports, and there's no substitute for competition. For me, that's critical," Anderson said. "Have you shot a free throw with the game on the line? Are you a hitter who's battled back from an 0-2 count? Have you taken a big penalty kick in a soccer game? These guys are constantly experiencing competition, and they're learning from their successes and failures."

Fierce opposition

If the Padres qualify for the playoffs for the second straight year, the new CCS guidelines presumably will protect them against placement in either of the section's top two brackets.

But Carmel's rugged preseason schedule is designed to battle-test the team with playoff-level opposition.

The Padres' four non-league opponents combined for 35 victories last year and all reached the postseason. Christopher (Aug. 30 on the road) was 11-3 and played Soquel in the CCS D2 finals. Seaside (Sept. 6 at CHS) was 7-4 and reached the D4 playoffs. Miramonte (Sept. 13 in Orinda), 9-4, won the North Coast Section's D5 crown and advanced to NorCals. Monterey (Sept. 20, CHS), 8-4, reached the D2 semifinals.

The Mission South Division loses 2023 runner-up Alisal (11-2, CCS finalist in Division 3), which moves to the Mission North. In Alisal's place will be Division Mission South holdovers are North Salinas (7-4), Pacific Grove (7-3), King City (4-6), Soledad (2-8), Rancho San Juan (2-8), and the Padres, who were 6-0 in league games last fall.

The coaching staff will get its first glimpse of this year's team in live combat at 5:30 p.m. Friday, when the Padres travel to a "jamboree" at North Monterey County High to scrimmage the host Condors and St. Francis.

Wine Olympics, Labor Day plans and a happy hour switcheroo

IF YOU'VE ever attempted a blind wine tasting — the kind where you try to figure out what kind of wine you're drinking, how old it is, and so on — you know it's pretty daunting. Most aficionados can easily tell a pinot from a zinfandel, or a chardonnay from a sauvignon blanc. But what about Spanish or Australian varietals? Is the Champagne non-vintage or vintage? Is that cabernet from Chile or Sonoma?

The head begins to spin, and it's not just from all the sips.

But that's the world of the professional sommelier — a place where perfectly good and often expensive wine is rarely swallowed. A place where, said Paige Post-Bindel, she has a cup of coffee and a banana for breakfast and brushes her teeth three hours before a tasting competition starts, then restricts herself to water to preserve her palate. Since she and three teammates will represent the United States in an international competition in October — a "Wine Olympics," as she describes it — those details can be significant.

Bindel is the sommelier for Peppoli restaurant in Pebble Beach and a descendent of the Post family of Big Sur. She's married to David Bindel Jr., and her father-in-law, David Bindel, owned the Old Bath House and the American Tin Cannery in Pacific Grove. While working as a bartender, she said her "love of beverage morphed into a love of wine." A wine-tasting sojourn in Italy sealed the deal. It's been more than 20 years since she started working at Peppoli and began building an impressive resume as a sommelier and wine educator.

purchase wines and pour them, and the women try to sleuth out all the pertinent information — country, region, grape, producer and vintage — based on what's in their glasses.

Think fast

When the World Tasting Challenge starts, each team will have to identify a dozen quaffs. "We get two minutes to personally assess each wine" on its appearance, aromatics and taste, and then 10 minutes to discuss it as a team, Bindel said. They weigh the evidence from their brief experiences with the pour, using a process of elimination to narrow possibilities that seem endless. Wine Enthusiast magazine says there are more than 10,000 grape varietals, which it culled to a list of 300 that dominate the market. Thirty-eight nations produce 85 percent of the world's wine, not to mention the regions into which they're subdivided — 152 in California alone. It's a lot to glean from a few sips consumed in less time than it takes to burn microwave popcorn.

The team will fly to Bourdeaux five days early to practice and get over any jet lag. The competition begins at 9 a.m. on Oct. 12, and Bindel expects it will take about half a day, followed by a celebration and dinner. "It's such an honor to be chosen to represent my country," she said.

Although the United States has been in the Top 10 before, it's never won, so the possibility of being first lingers tantalizingly, like the last drops of a fine port slipping from bottle to glass.

Psst ... it's almost Labor Day

What the heck happened to summer? If there weren't lingering evidence of Concours, we'd say it was impossible that we're already staring down September's arrival. Nothing says Labor Day like barbecue, and the Crossroads BBQ's smokers will be going full blast, putting out two special packages for the occasion. The Hustler feeds three or four people with your choice of three meats, two sides and half a loaf of garlic bread for $70, while the Big Boss is for four or five hungry guests who can share three meats, three sides and a full loaf of garlic bread. Order online at thecrossroadsbbq.com before Aug. 26 and use the promo code "smoked" to get $7.50 off either pack.

Bruno's at Sixth and Junipero is planning its annual barbecue, too, for Saturday, Aug. 31 and Sunday, Sept. 1. You'll be able to smell it for blocks. Chicken, beef and other grilled goodies, along with an assortment of tempting sides from the deli case, will ensure your guests don't go hungry over the three-day weekend. ## Shearwater changes up Happy Hour

Chef Fabian di Paolo at the Carmel Mission Inn has been tweaking the happy hour menu in Shearwater Tavern with new seasonal cocktails and bar bites. The Carmel Breeze is a "refreshing blend of Ketel One vodka, fresh strawberries and lemon juice" served in a glass with a sugar rim. The restaurant's namesake Shearwater Mojito blends Cruzan rum, watermelon, mint, simple syrup and lime juice, while the Steinbeck-themed East of Eden offers Hendrick's Gin, cucumber, St. Germain elderflower liqueur and lime and the Monterey Margarita adds raspberries to tequila, lime and Cointreau for a twist on the classic cocktail.

Happy hour is Tuesday through Thursday from 4 to 5:30 p.m., and once you've picked a cocktail, you can pair it with a variety of new bar bites priced at $6 to $9 and meant to be shared. They include some variations on bruschetta and crostini, along with baby back ribs served with guava glaze and chimichurri, Spanish-style fingerling potatoes with piquillo pepper aioli, meatball sliders and crispy kettle chips and chicharrónes (fried pork). The Carmel Mission Inn and Shearwater Tavern are at 3665 Rio Road. Breakfast and dinner menus and other offerings are available at shearwatertavern.com.

Sunset hosts free art workshop, museum welcomes old photo display

OFFERING A family-friendly afternoon of creative play, artist Marie-Clare Gorham presents a free coloring and mask-making workshop Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., on the Sunset Center Terrace.

Gorham is the artist who won a contest to paint a large mural alongside the Palomas Home Furnishings on Mission Street near Ocean. The public art display caught the attention of Hofsas House Hotel, which offered her an opportunity to be its first artist-in-residence.

Art Roundup

By CHRIS COUNTS

Sunset Center describes Gorham as "a folk artist heavily influenced by the ethos of the California Arts and Crafts movement and medieval themes.'

While the workshop is designed for those between 3 and 11, "all are welcome."

Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth.

'Under the Guard Tower'

Two shows are new at the Monterey Museum of Art, including "Under the Guard Tower," which explores the watercolors painter Chikaji Kawakami created while he was confined to an internment camp during World War II. The exhibit opened Thursday.

Along with two others, Kawakami founded an art school in his camp, which was located in Topaz, Utah. There, they taught more than 1,000 students.

According to the museum, Kawakami's "tranquil, dignified landscapes" radiate "calm and beauty despite his three-year imprisonment."

Besides Kawakami's display, an exhibit by painter and printmaker Robert Brokl opens Friday at the museum, which is located at 559 Pacific St. Also, the coming week marks your last chance to see painter David Ligare's

"Spheres of Influence," which has been up since May.

Art at the West End

Besides providing stages for more than two dozen musical acts, this weekend's West End Celebration features a bustling marketplace showcasing 120 artists. "The West End Celebration welcomes an impressive array of artisans and vendors who will showcase their unique creations, ranging from fine art and handmade crafts, to innovative designs and culinary delights," the event announced.

The roster of artists selling their wares at the annual street fair includes painters Kristi Peterson, Adam Hansen, John Paul Magan, Sofanya White and Julia Esdaile, sculptor John Chappell, glass artists Shelby Hawthorne, Kellie Wood and Barbara Orr, photographers Michelle Robertson and Tom Cohen, jewelers Carmen Davis and Carol Long, and weaver Belinda Cardoza. For a complete list, visit westendcelebration.com.
